Sun storms send TV viewers bad vibes

by PAUL GORES
What's causing those black, wavy lines on your television set when it's tuned to WBBM-TV, Channel 2? The answer is probably 93 million miles away.
Costation interference, or "venetian blinds" as TV repairmen call it, are the result of atmospheric conditions caused by storms on the sun.
One local television repairman said sun storms, which appear as spots on the sun's surface, give off a tremendous amount of energy which ionizes upper layers of the atmosphere and causes them to reflect TV signals normally lost to the atmosphere.

As a result, TV signals from stations as far as 1,000 miles away are reflected and picked up by low-channel receivers, such as Channel 2.
"SO WHAT YOU'RE really seeing is probably a station from Milwaukee or somewhere trying to come in on Channel 2," he said. "And there's nothing you can do about it." This type of interference occurs most as seasons change.
Several area residents have complained within the last two weeks about black, wavy lines on Channel 2. Citizens' Band radios or some other type of electrical source were suspected as the cause.

L. A. Pierce, director of the technical department for CBS in Chicago, agreed sun storms are probably the source of interference.
"It is characteristic of low frequencies such as Channel 2 to pick up signals from stations as far as 1,000 miles away," Pierce said.
Nothing can be done to eliminate or reduce interference caused by sun storms, Pierce said.

When is there smoke but no fire...

Where there's smoke there's not always fire

All the elements of a fire were there: smoke billowed from the windows as firemen swung their hatchets, sprayed their bulging hoses and even rescued stranded "victims."

So realistic were the conditions that crowds gathered to watch as Arlington Heights firemen participated in training drills Wednesday at 414 N. Vail Ave., former site of the Country-side Art Center.

Firemen will utilize the soon-to-be-demolished building again today for additional training exercises.

The art center is now housed at 408 N. Vail Ave.

A needed rest is still appreciated.

'We can't afford it': McCarthy

by NANCY GOTLER

Five days a week Mike Kereven drives an empty Continental Air Transport Co. bus down Northwest Highway to O'Hare Airport.

His employers say they can't afford to continue the service without modifying it. But, possibly because of pressure from Arlington Heights Village Pres. James T. Ryan, the company won't admit what Kereven and fellow driver Ed Rice say is inevitable: that the runs will be halted.

"We can't afford to keep it up now," Continental Vice Pres. John C. McCarthy said, "but I can't say that it definitely will be discontinued."

"We're planning on talking with (Northwest suburban) village officials next week and hope to look at readjustment of the schedule," he said. "Things like cutting back the number of runs a day, stepping up limousine service and a guaranteed ridership program are possibilities."

BUT SOME SAY those measures would even further discourage riders because buses will not be available when they are needed and residents will not patronize a service that might be temporary.

Taking a bus to the airport does have advantages. The one-way fare is $4.25, compared to approximately $11 for a cab and $15 for a limousine. And residents who drive to O'Hare will be assessed a $3.15-per-day parking fee.

The history of Continental's service to the Northwest suburbs has been controversial and erratic. In 1974 the route between the suburbs and the airport was discontinued because of low ridership and rising fuel costs.

Last year Ryan, angered at that decision, filed a complaint against Continental with the Illinois Commerce Commission in an attempt to force the company to either resume service or lose its rights to the route.

IN JUNE, Continental agreed to reinstate the route on a trial basis. But McCarthy said the experiment has been disappointing. The run averages 1.7 passengers per trip, far below his prediction of eight.

And bus driver Kereven said he picks up only one passenger a week during his 11 a.m. route from Arlington Park racetrack to the airport.

The buses, with a 29 passenger capacity, leave Arlington Park at 6:20, 11 a.m. and 2 and 5:10 p.m. and the airport at 10:35 a.m., 1:35, 4:15 and 6:30 p.m. Only the 4:15 and 6:30 p.m. runs continue to Palatine and Barrington.

Buses leave Palatine from the Smith and Colfax station at 5:55, 7:10 a.m. and 5 p.m.

"The 120-day trial run was supposed to end the end of August," McCarthy said, "but because we wanted to have a few more figures after Labor Day, it's been extended until the end of September."

CONTINENTAL HAS a contract with the City of Chicago for ground transportation and must provide service "where there is a need," he said.

However, if it is determined there is no need for bus service between the Northwest suburbs and the airport, McCarthy said Continental could discontinue service without violating its charter.

Ryan is on vacation and unavailable for comment on Continental's current problem, but Palatine Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones said if service is halted area residents will not feel a transportation pinch.

"I don't know too many people who are taking the bus," he said, "because it's not as convenient for them. Many executives living in our area are on expense accounts and just take a limousine."

HE SAID HE favors strengthening the Regional Transportation Authority service to the Northwest suburbs instead of weakened Continental service.

"Although I told Mr. Ryan at the time (of his complaint about Continental to ICC) that we would back his action," Jones said, "I would favor an RTA that functions."

"If Continental discontinued its service, it probably wouldn't affect the people here any more than if the RTA discontinued its service," he said. "The people in the Northwest suburbs are already paying for transportation service — the RTA — and not getting it."

"This might not seem to have anything to do with whether Continental continues its service, but it does," Jones said. "Because the real issue is transportation."

Meanwhile, McCarthy is planning how to cope with the problem. "People are used to door-to-door service and have come to expect it. It's going to be a matter of time and re-education. People are just going to have to be educated toward mass transportation."

Ford dares Carter to 'earn' trust

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — President Ford officially opened his campaign against Jimmy Carter at his alma mater Wednesday, challenging the Democratic candidate head-on with "it is not enough for anyone to say 'trust me' — trust must be earned."

Ford came back to the University of Michigan where he was graduated 40 years ago and said he led the nation to "an incredible comeback" during his two years in the White House.

"The question in this campaign of 1976 is not, 'Who has the better vision of America?' " Ford said. "The question is, 'Who will act to make that vision a reality?'"

FORD'S SPEECH was his first outside Washington since winning the Republican nomination for election.

There were hecklers in the Michigan audience, but Ford got a one-minute standing ovation when he made his entrance with his wife.

Just as Ford was winding up his speech, a firecracker went off in the upper balcony of the Crisler Arena. Secret Service agents rushed to the spot. No one was injured.

Ford's speech was aimed at what White House aides say is Carter's greatest weakness — apparent indecisiveness and inconsistency. It said the American public deserves "specifics — not smiles, performance — not promises" from candidates.

"IT IS NOT enough for anyone to say 'Trust me.' Trust must be earned. Trust is not having to guess what a candidate means. Trust is leveling with the people before the election about what we're going to do after the

"Trust is not being all things to all people, but being the same thing to all people. Trust is not cleverly shading words so that each separate audience can hear what it wants to hear, but saying plainly and simply what you mean and meaning what you say."

In policy matters, Ford broke major new ground only in the area of housing.

He said he would recommend changes in the Federal Housing Administration law "to reduce down payments on lower and middle priced housing, by up to 50 per cent."

He also said he would order the Housing and Urban Development Dept. to speed up a new federal guarantee program to lower monthly payments in early years of ownership and gradually increase them as family income rises.

ON OTHER MAJOR issues, Ford pledged to continue policies which he said were aimed at creating 2.5 million new jobs each year, holding down inflation, assuring all Americans "accessible and affordable" health care, producing "quality education," and foreign policies to keep the nation out of war.

Ford said he would fight unemployment "with an emphasis on our youth, especially the minorities," to produce "permanent jobs" in the private sector rather than "demeaning, dead-end jobs paid for out of the federal treasury."

Ford, hinting at some new future effort to help young Americans entering the job market, recalled the government has grants, loans and scholarships to help provide a college education.

"I believe we can apply this same principle to create a program for young people who choose not to go to college, but want a job at which they can learn a trade, a craft or practical business skills," he said.

Dist. 25 vote tonight on teachers' pact

The Arlington Heights Dist. 25 Board of Education will vote on the 1976-77 teachers' contract at 8 p.m. today at Park School, 306 W. Park St., Arlington Heights.

The contract, which was approved by the teachers Sept. 7, calls for an average 7.27 per cent salary increase for teachers. Salary increases for individual teachers will range from 2.5 to 10 per cent.

The administration also will present enrollment figures for the opening of school.

The average daily enrollment figure for the first six days of school was 7,411 this year compared with 7,953 students last year.

Gerold Williams, director of administration and planning, said Wednesday that this year's opening enrollment figure is about 235 students short of the district's projections.

He said the major cause for the deviation was the kindergarten enrollment projection. The district anticipated having 821 kindergarten students but only 705 enrolled.

Liquor license ban urged for nightclub

Schaumburg officials plan to ask the Illinois Appellate Court to reinstate a 20-day liquor license suspension for a village nightclub. Cook County Circuit Court Judge Arthur Dunno recently ruled in support of an Illinois Liquor Control Commission ruling ordering B'Ginnings Ltd., 1227 E. Golf Rd., closed for three days in May. Dunno said he agreed with Village Pres. Raymond Kessell's 20-day suspension, but said he could not find legal authority to overturn the state commission's ruling. Kessell, who as village president also serves as village liquor commissioner, said the B'Ginnings matter must be pursued "in the interest of defining and supporting the concept of local control."

Owner to fight for pinball games

The owner of an Elk Grove Village record shop said Wednesday he will fight to keep his pinball arcade, which village officials say violates zoning codes and the store's lease. Frank Schlinkhoff, owner of One Octave Higher at the Grove Mall Shopping Center, said both the shopping center management and the village were consulted before he and his father spent $30,000 to buy the 20 machines and remodel the store. Schlinkhoff said he had a verbal agreement with the mall management for installation of the machines and has village licenses to operate the arcade. Village Atty. George B. Knickerbocker has said the licenses were "issued incorrectly" because the store is in a zoning district that prohibits amusement centers.

Des Plaines may pass up funds

Des Plaines Mayor Charles J. Bolek Wednesday said it is unlikely the city will apply for up to $170,000 in 1978 under the U.S. Housing and Community Development Act.

The city council has passed up $469,000 during the first two years of the program, and Bolek said he does not foresee much change in the attitudes of the city council in the third year. "My guess is that the city won't apply for the funds because I don't think there is enough support on the city council," he said. Under the federal program, the city could use the funds for public improvements to benefit low-and moderate-income families and to prevent the deterioration of present housing. The funds would not be used to finance new construction.

Union strike against Lag ends

The six-week-old strike by 120 Teamsters Union employees against the Lag Drug Co., 381 N. Third St., Des Plaines, has ended. Raymond Hamilton, business representative and trustee for the International Brotherhood of Teamsters 743, said Wednesday the union reached agreement with the company Monday afternoon and that the striking employees returned to work Tuesday. He refused, however, to release the details of the settlement. "The strike is over, but that is about all I can say," he said. Officials of the Lag Drug Co., a wholesale distributor of drugs, also were unavailable for comment Wednesday. The strike reportedly was the first in the company's history.

Dist. 25 to vote on teacher pact

The contract, which was approved by the teachers Sept. 7, calls for an average 7.27 per cent increase for teachers. Salary increases for individual teachers will range from 2.5 per cent to 10 per cent.

Firms must help end crime: Kelley

by DAVE IBATA

Businessmen and corporations actively must help police in battling white-collar crime, FBI Director Clarence M. Kelley told metropolitan industry and business leaders in Chicago Wednesday.

During a luncheon speech delivered at a seminar on commercial crime sponsored by the Chicago Assn. of Commerce and Industry, Kelley said, "We want to reduce crime — that is the major goal of law enforcement. But we cannot do it alone.

"The vital element is citizen involvement — citizen resistance to crime," Kelley said.

The Director spoke at the Pick-Triest Hotel in downtown Chicago before an audience of more than 300 representatives of area businesses and law enforcement agencies.

Kelley urged businessmen to combat crime by taking preventive measures.

"On the one hand, citizens and businesses must form a firm crime resistance resolve. They must become determined to develop as through an understanding of practical crime resistance approaches as they can, and then make crime resistance a habit — a way of life," Kelley said.

Kelley said that while the FBI traditionally has entered a case after the crime has been committed, lately it has begun a crime prevention program aimed at educating citizens. The bureau has begun in-house seminars for its employees and has sponsored seminars for cities and corporations.

"WE HAVE participated in numerous seminars and other activities with those in industry, government and law enforcement in an effort to curb white-collar crimes which are costing Americans an estimated $40 billion annually," Kelley said.

The FBI's objective, Kelley said, "is to see that it (crime prevention) is made a facet, a part of, integrated with the lives of all Americans."

Kelley urged businessmen to follow the FBI's lead in "turning inward" and fostering crime resistance programs among employees. The director also urged businessmen to set up crime resistance programs within their firms, with the aid of local law enforcement agencies.

"A well-planned, well-managed crime resistance effort is, in my estimation, simply good business," Kelley said. "Crime is everyone's concern. It's also everyone's responsibility."

Power earthquakes felt in six European countries

UDINE, Italy (UPI) — A string of powerful earthquakes felt in six European countries killed and injured dozens Wednesday in northeast Italy's hilly Friuli region, where a slightly stronger quake May 6 killed nearly 1,000 persons.

Officials estimated another 20,000 homeless joined the 41,000 who have been living since May in tent cities turned into squatters by recurrent rainstorms.

Police said at least seven persons died in the two dozen major shocks that rocked the Friuli region from early morning to sunset.

The dead included three persons buried under debris, three killed by heart attacks and a Venice shipworker who fell 20 feet to his death while attempting to escape from a shaking vessel.

Fire officials said several motorists may have died in a landslide on a mountain road.

More than 60 persons were injured, including several soldiers who jumped from barracks windows.

Thousands fled their homes in northern Italy and parts of Yugoslavia, Austria and West Germany after the first shock hit with a force of 6.3 on the open-ended Richter scale. The quake also was felt in Switzerland and France.

A stronger shock came next. It registered 6.4 on the Richter scale — just short of the 6.9 point shock of May 6 that killed nearly 1,000 persons and left tens of thousands homeless.

"It is a frightening morning," said the Rev. P. Coccia, director of the Prolo observatory near Florence. "We are recording repeated phenomena and there doesn't seem to be an end."

Villagers who had refused to leave their homes after the May disaster panicked and demanded emergency relocation.

Giuseppe Zamberletti, commissioner for relief work, arranged truck convoys for the refugees and said he might requisition rooms in nearby beach resorts and private homes if their owners did not provide free accommodations.

The tremors, along with another shock last Saturday ruined much of the reconstruction work completed since the May quake. Police said buildings weakened by that quake collapsed in about a dozen towns and villages including Gemona, Majano, Trasaghis, Pradelis, Osoppo, Venzone and Ugovizza.

In Vito d'Asio, a home being repaired by several men toppled on their heads, killing one and critically injuring three.

An Italian parliamentary delegation which came to study relief for victims of the May quake fled their Udine hotel when the first tremor struck.

They fled again six hours later when the second main shock cracked walls of the building where they were meeting with Friuli mayors.

RESIDENTS OF MAIANO, Italy stare at pile of rubble that was a building until an early morning earthquake Wednesday — registering 6.3 on the Richter scale — rocked the area. Dozens of quakes hit the hills of northeastern Italy and five other European countries.

S. Africa peace less hopeful: Tanzania

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (UPI) — President Julius Nyerere of Tanzania said Wednesday 4½ hours of talks with Secretary of State Henry Kissinger left him "less hopeful, less encouraged than before" about chances for peace in southern Africa.

Nyerere, leader of the five so-called "front line" black African states working to overthrow the white minority regime in Rhodesia, said Kissinger would need a "miracle" to convince Prime Minister Ian Smith's Rhodesian government of the need for majority rule.

However, Nyerere told a news conference the first meeting in Kissinger's 10-day shuttle diplomacy mission was not necessarily a failure.

"I'm less hopeful, less encouraged than before," Nyerere said. "But if this visit clarifies for the United States the intransigence of the white minority in southern Africa, that would not be a failure."

A spokesman for Kissinger said the two leaders "discussed in great detail the major issues of South West Africa (Namibia) and Rhodesia."

They agreed to meet again next Tuesday in Dar es Salaam, the spokesman said, after Kissinger's trips to Pretoria, South Africa and Lusaka, Zambia. Kissinger aides earlier said a return visit to Tanzania by the secretary would mean the talks were going well.

While Kissinger and Nyerere met,

Smith attempted to convince his Rhodesian Front party to participate in the American effort to stave off racial war in southern Africa.

At a meeting at Umtali, Rhodesia, near the troubled border with Mozambique, party officials said Smith will present a plan for negotiations over majority rule.

If he gets a mandate for his plan, he might meet with Kissinger in Pretoria next week, party officials said.

They added the plan would meet strong opposition.

Asked repeatedly why he was less hopeful than before, Nyerere answered in scholarly, elliptical terms which boiled down to his frequently repeated phrases: "Nobody has told me that Ian Smith's regime is convinced of majority rule . . . Nobody has told me that the South Africans are ready to convene a constitutional conference on Namibia."

Nyerere seemed most hopeful about the possibility of a conference to settle the problem of Namibia. He said it first would be necessary for the South African government to accept the participation of the South West African Peoples' Organization, the liberation group backed by black African countries.

Asked if he and Kissinger had made progress, Nyerere said, "What kind of progress can be made? We only exchanged views."

Panel votes to reopen JFK, King cases

The House Rules Committee Wednesday voted to reopen the investigations of the assassinations of President John F. Kennedy and Martin Luther King through a special House committee with sweeping powers. The rules committee resolution asking the House to set up the assassination committee was passed 9 to 4 and sent to the floor for final approval. The authorization as it stood was so broad it would give the special panel powers to investigate any death it chose.

Penny, half dollar may be on way out

The Treasury Department, citing increased coinage costs, announced Wednesday it may do away with the penny and the half dollar and replace the silver dollar with a smaller lighter version. The treasury released the results of an 18-month, $120,000 study indicating the cost of making pennies may soon outstrip their value and concluding that "the half-dollar circulates very little; the dollar (coin) does not circulate at all." Mary Brooks, director of the Mint, told a news conference the department may decide before the year is out whether to accept suggestions on coinage changes.

Passing lie test grade claimed by Howe

Rep. Allan Howe, D-Utah, released results of a lie detector test Wednesday which he said backed up his story that he was innocent of soliciting sex from two police decoy prostitutes. Howe, convicted on a misdemeanor charge of offering $20 for various sex acts to the two decoys, kicked off his reelection campaign with a news conference at which he said he passed a polygraph examination by a Chicago expert.

The test was administered by Leonard Harrelson, director of the Keeler Polygraph Institute, and showed the freshman Democrat told the truth in court, according to Howe. The two young women, who also took lie detector tests and were given passing marks by police officials, testified that Howe offered to pay them for sex.

Unit votes to deny lawmaker pay hikes

House and Senate conferees voted Wednesday to deny an almost 5 per cent cost of living pay raise to members of Congress, federal judges and top level government workers. Approving a compromise $1 billion legislative appropriations bill, the conferees also agreed to accept a Senate amendment repealing the automatic 1 per cent increase added to cost-of-living raises for military and civil service retirement pensions. The compromise bill must be approved by both houses of Congress.

Blast halts water flow to Los Angeles

An explosion early Wednesday ripped through an aqueduct which supplies 80 per cent of Los Angeles' water, damaging a water gate and a gate house. The explosion halted the flow of water to Los Angeles but a spokesman for the Los Angeles Department of Water and Power, which operates the aqueduct, said: "Because of the backup reservoirs we have in the Los Angeles Basin we do not feel there will be any interruption of service to people."

They also were assigned medical and other scientific experiments.

Flu public awareness drive ready

ATLANTA (UPI) — Billboards and television public service commercials soon will be urging Americans to "roll up your sleeve" for swine flu shots, federal health officials said Wednesday.

The national Center for Disease Control said the exhortations directed toward 200 million Americans will be part of a massive public awareness campaign to get the already-lagging immunization campaign off the ground when vaccine becomes available the first week of October.

Don Berreth, CDC public information officer, said the slogan "Roll Up Your Sleeve America" had been adopted for the program, including a picture of the international traffic sign for "no" with the word "flu" crossed out.

The CDC is turning out 800 public service commercials for television stations urging Americans to get swine flu shots this fall and winter when public clinics begin operating at shopping centers, hospitals, government buildings and other public places.

The shots will be free but each person will be required to sign a consent form which outlines benefits of the shot, warns of some side effects and lists certain categories of persons who should not get the vaccinations.

Berreth said the commercials, including one in Spanish, will be distributed to state health departments, along with suggested billboard and newspaper ads, posters and lapel buttons that say, "I did."

The publicity campaign will be coordinated to start with arrival of the vaccine shipments in the various states.

A line of persons are shown getting inoculations with a jet gun in the television spots, none of which runs more than 30 seconds. An actor says, "See how easy it is to protect yourself against flu." The spots end with, "Roll up your sleeve, protect yourself."

Berreth said the publicity emphasizes that "flu is a serious disease but that it can be prevented because there is an excellent vaccine available."

The CDC expects 20 million doses of the vaccine to be received by the states Oct. 1 and the program to be substantially completed by the first of the year, although the flu "season" normally starts in late November or early December.

Delay in auto exhaust standards voted

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House voted Wednesday to postpone for five years the imposition of tougher auto exhaust standards under the Clean Air Act of 1970.

Rep. John D. Dingell, D-Mich., won a 224-169 approval vote on his amendment relaxing the timetable for the stricter requirements. The House rejected a provision backed by Rep. Paul Rogers, D-Fla., that would ease the current law's requirements, but not as much as Dingell's provision.

The House hoped to complete work on the bill, which covers such problem areas as smoke from factories, switching of fuels, new developments that would pollute and transportation controls.

Dingell said both the existing law and the car exhaust standards recommended by Rogers' subcommittee would put a "straitjacket" on an auto industry that is trying to make cars that get more miles to the gallon.

Current law imposed certain clean-exhaust standards on the 1976 models, which came out a year ago. Those standards were to get considerably tougher for the three main pollutants — hydrocarbons, carbon monoxide and nitrogen oxides — in the models that come out next year.

The Clean Air Act amendments sponsored chiefly by Rogers and written up by his health and environment subcommittee would have made existing law somewhat more lenient.

But Rogers would have gotten to the tougher standards by the 1980 models, which come out in late 1979. The Dingell amendment would reach the tougher standards only in late 1981 for hydrocarbons and carbon monoxide, and would never get as strict on nitrogen oxide as the existing law.

Dingell said the existing law would impose a big gasoline penalty when Americans are being urged to conserve fuel. Auto makers say they cannot get the technology to meet the clean-air standards without seriously affecting a car's fuel economy.

Abortion language accord in money bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In a blow against abortions for "emotional and social convenience," congressional conferees agreed Wednesday on the language in a $56.6 billion bill allowing federal money to be used for abortions only when the mother's life is "endangered."

They also agreed on the language in the bill's accompanying report which went further in saying when abortions could be paid for with federal money — primarily under Medicaid programs.

The conference report also made it clear that the amendment was not intended to prohibit abortions for rape or incest victims, "nor is it intended to prohibit the use of drugs or devices to prevent implantation of the fertilized ovum."

Moreover, the report added abortions would not be prohibited when a pregnant mother had multiple sclerosis or renal disease, two diseases in which pregnancy could result in the shortening of life.

The decision, reached by conferees representing the Senate and the House, ended months of fighting over abortion, a top political issue in the presidential campaign.

In the $56.6 billion bill are funds for the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, the Labor Department and other agencies for the 1977 fiscal year, starting Oct. 1. Between $45-50 million in federal funds were spent last year to perform 250,000 abortions.

The bill, agreed to by the conferees, must be approved by Congress.

Schorr refuses to betray source

• Citing the First Amendment and his own professional standards, CBS reporter Daniel Schorr refused under oath Wednesday to tell House investigators where he obtained the classified intelligence report he leaked to the press. Testifying before the House Ethics Committee, and warned repeatedly he might be prosecuted for refusal to cooperate, Schorr said if he disclosed the source of the report "the ultimate losers would be the American people and their free institutions. But, beyond all that, to betray a source would be to betray myself, my career, and my life. It is not as simple as saying that I refuse to do it. • A West Point cadet has been sentenced to dismissal from the Army and five years at hard labor for raping a Smith College coed. Lavelle McNutt, 18, of Columbia, Md. is believed to be the first West Point cadet ever found guilty of rape.

• Former Nixon aide John Ehrlichman Wednesday won reinstatement of his bond and at least a two-month delay of the prison sentence he had been ordered to start serving Friday. The U.S. Court of Appeals decreed Ehrlichman may remain free on his own recognizance pending the outcome of a Supreme Court appeal.

Ford hedging on social issues, Mondale says

by United Press International Democratic vice presidential nominee Walter Mondale Wednesday night accused President Ford of "bold misrepresentation" by expressing concern for health, housing and unemployment in his campaign kickoff speech.

Asked in Chicago for reaction to the speech, Mondale said, "the main surprise is the baldness of the misrepresentation incorporated in that speech . . . the only surprise here is that he thinks the American people would actually be gullible enough to buy statements of this kind in light of the miserable record of his administration and his personal positions on these programs."

Mondale said the issues singled out by Ford "are exactly the issues on which he's done the poorest job."

"THEIR RECORD ON employment is abominable with two and a half million more Americans out of work; their record on home ownership is a disgrace; their record on health care is absolutely indefensible, yet he is trying to tell the American people that he's for them, identifies with their needs, hoping apparently that the American people will not realize the difference between what he's done and what he's saying now."

The Minnesota Senator said Ford's speech "undermines any possibility that the American people can trust their statements or have any confidence that they are truthfully committed to meeting the real needs of the American people."

Mondale said he and his ticket mate Jimmy Carter have made it "very clear" where they stand on the same issues.

"The difference is that Mr. Ford has a record that belies and puts the falsehood to everything he now claims he's for."

Mondale said he hopes the American public will "see this" and realize that if they want more jobs, improved health care, decent housing and an emphasis in parks and recreation, "it is only the Democratic Party that offers this opportunity."

Offtrack betting by 1978: Daley

Mayor Richard J. Daley said Wednesday Chicago may have offtrack horse race betting by 1978. "We've been researching it with intelligent men and women who run the system in New York," Daley told a news conference. "I understand about $35 million to $40 million, maybe more now, goes into the treasury of the city."

Daley didn't say whether the city would run its own bookmaking operation or just license and tax the messenger services already in existence. He said city aides have been exploring offtrack betting in connection with the 1977 city budget but, "I don't know if it can go into effect in 1977. It takes time to set up." Asked if offtrack betting could be in operation by 1978, Daley said, "I would think so."

Record Chicago school budget

Chicago School Supt. Joseph P. Hannon Wednesday presented a tentative 1976-77 school budget with a record $147.1 million deficit — but said he hoped to avoid teacher layoffs and a shortened school year. Hannon proposed spending $1.19 billion, but said anticipated revenue was only $1.04 billion, leaving the largest deficit in the history of Chicago public schools. Hannon said the school board was aiming for a full school year of 178 days in contrast to the 1975-76 year, which ended 18 days early because of shortage of funds.

Cops seek Teamsters' help

Chicago policemen have turned to the powerful Teamsters union for help in their battle with Mayor Richard J. Daley to win collective bargaining rights and a contract, the president of the Chicago Patrolmen's Assn. said Wednesday. "We have been banging our head for years in trying to get collective bargaining and a written contract with the city," Joseph Pecoraro said. "So we decided to get a big stick. Now, with the Teamsters, we'll have a big stick."

Murder suspect beaten: lawyer

Willie Lewis, 27, charged with shooting and killing a police officer, appeared in court Wednesday with swollen eyes and his forehead bandaged and his lawyer hinted he had been beaten by police. Lewis was arrested Monday night and charged with murder in the death of patrolman Patrick J. Crowley.

Lewis' attorney, Michael Jay Green, told the court his client was heavily bandaged "with blood filled eyes" and his pants "appeared covered with blood." He said Lewis "did not appear this way until he was taken into custody" and asked that photographs be taken of Lewis.

Illinois briefs

Speck parole denied by officials

Illinois parole officials took only 10 minutes Wednesday to deny freedom to Richard Speck, the Texas drifter convicted of murdering eight Chicago nurses in 1966. Speck, 34, a sometime seaman from Dallas, was given a folded statement in private by an aide to the Stateville Prison warden telling him, "Parole is denied." At morning-long private and public hearings, Speck was called "a fiend . . . spawned in hell."

The father of one of Speck's victims said he wished the hearing "was an execution" and that Speck should be behind bars "as long as the girls are in their graves." It was Speck's first bid for freedom since he was sentenced to 400 to 1,200 years in prison for the murders committed July 14, 1966, in a townhouse on Chicago's far South Side. Authorities said Speck would be given another chance for parole in 10 to 12 months.

He had little reason for optimism. Chairman Peter Kotsos said the Illinois Parole and Pardon Board had received "more than 3,000 letters from all over the world asking that parole be denied." Those who appeared at the hearing unanimously opposed Speck's release.

School penalty appeal urged

Former Illinois School Supt. Michael Bakalis said Wednesday the decision of a Cook County Circuit Court judge holding unconstitutional a $53.3 million early closing penalty against Chicago schools should be appealed to the Illinois Supreme Court. Bakalis, Democratic candidate for comptroller, said he was not asking for an appeal of the decision because he wants to see Chicago schools penalized but said it could have far-reaching effects and needs clarification. He said a clarification was needed on how a penalty could be assessed. "I think the court saying that the Office of Education had no authority to impose the penalty is not a very wise policy," Bakalis said. He said other districts in the state might decide they also want to close early.

Panel approves
'meaningless'
ethics ordinance

An ethics ordinance for elected and appointed Arlington Heights officials has been approved by the village board's legal committee, although some trustees called the law "meaningless."

The ordinance, first proposed more than a year ago, "is just window dressing," Trustee David Griffin, chairman of the legal committee, said.

The state statute regarding ethics is much stricter, he said. The village's ethics ordinance will not restrict the application of any state statute.

The ordinance will apply to all elected officials, appointed officials, members of village boards and commissions, and any village employees with salaries in excess of $20,000 per year with the village clerk.

The law requires that statements of ownership, gifts, loans, business interests and other employment be filed every year before May 1.

The ordinance carries a penalty of $500 per offense.

A major change made in the ordinance since it was originally drafted, requires persons employed as attorneys, insurance agents or real estate brokers to report only the firm or corporation they are employed by and clients who do business with the village.

The ordinance now will be sent to the village board for final approval.

Zinging bullets disturb family's TV viewing

by DANN GIRE

John and Amy Greno moved to Hoffman Estates from Chicago three months ago to get away from the high crime area where they lived.

They thought the suburbs would be a nice place to raise their two children, Mark, 4, and Laura, 5.

That was before bullets began zinging through their apartment at 216 Grand Canyon Pkwy. Wednesday night.

"I was watching 'Starsky and Hutch' when I heard what I thought was a lot of pounding on the walls," John, 23, said. "Then after three or four shots, I knew bullets were coming through the wall. I shouted to Amy to stay (in the bedroom) with the kids. I hit the floor."

ONE BULLET went through the kitchen wall, bounded off the ceiling and hit the living room curtain rod. Others were imbedded in a kitchen cabinet. Another put a sizable dent in a steel filing cabinet. The apartment was sprinkled with falling plaster.

"At first I thought something had been knocked over," said 22-year-old Amy Greno, who an hour after the incident asked her to get the police.

The Grenos' moment of terror lasted only long enough for some unidentified persons to pump 15 bullets through a vacant apartment window at the Grand Canyon apartment complex.

The bullets not only had passed through the window of the vacant apartment, but also through a dividing wall, kitchen cabinets, an apartment wall and finally into the Greno apartment next door.

"Usually I lay down in front of the TV (where one slug came to rest). I'm sure glad I wasn't there tonight," cident still was visibly shaken. "I got on the phone and called the operator John said.

HOFFMAN ESTATES police said the empty, bullet-riddled apartment was last occupied by Andrew Viso and his mother, who had moved out Monday night.

Two school teachers were to have moved in Tuesday or Wednesday, Mrs. Greno said. "The landlady said she was glad they didn't," she said.

Greno said he heard the bullets being fired, sometimes two at a time, "which makes me think there was sure more than one gun involved." He said one gun used in the incident "was either a .44 or .45 caliber. It's too big to be anything else."

Police earlier said that "small cal-ber" weapons were used in the assault on the apartment.

"We came to Hoffman Estates to get away from the neighborhood we lived in. We lived in a nice apartment, but we were afraid to have our children walk to school," John said. "Now we may move again."

GRENO IS a service repairman for a Des Plaines cash register company and Mrs. Greno is an office cashier in Chicago.

Hoffman Estates police, meanwhile, are seeking a dark blue 1963 or 1964 Chevrolet that a resident reported seeing shortly before the shooting began.

Police said Wednesday night they have several leads in the shooting but would not release information.

Village shows votomatic machine

A votomatic machine is on display at the Arlington Heights Municipal Building so voters may familiarize themselves with the new punch-card voting process, Village Clerk Ruth Ruff said.

Mrs. Ruff also said her office will be open today from 7 to 9 p.m. for residents who have not registered to vote in the Nov. 2 general election.

Voter registration will be accepted at the village hall, 33 S. Arlington Heights Rd., until 5 p.m. Friday. The office is open from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The Cook County Clerk's Office will accept voter registrations until 5 p.m. Sept. 27, Mrs. Ruff said.

The county clerk's office at 118 N. Clark St., Chicago, is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 9 a.m. to noon on Saturdays.

The county also will conduct a general precinct registration day in Arlington Heights from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. Oct. 5 at all precincts.

For more information, call the village clerk, 253-2340.

Second set of unit school hearings

The second series of hearings on the Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 area unit school district proposal will begin at 7:30 p.m. Oct. 13 at Elk Grove High School.

Members of the committee that filed petitions seeking a referendum on the unit district issue were contacted by County Schools' Supt. Richard Martwick this week and were told the hearings would deal with the financial and educational aspects of unit district consolidation.

Finances and educational considerations of a new unit district have sparked a heated debate between officials in High School Dist. 214 and Dist. 59.

THE CONTINUATION of the hearings — which began with a hearing in July on the legality of the petitions — indicates Martwick found the petitions in proper legal form.

The unit district has met strong opposition from Dist. 214 officials who say the proposed district would take about 40 per cent of the high school district's tax base but only about 27 per cent of the students.

Dist. 59 officials favor the unit district, saying tax revenue generated from the local residents would remain in the area rather than being used to support the larger area of Dist. 214.

The proposed unit district includes Forest View and Elk Grove high schools and Dist. 59 schools. The proposed boundaries are the same as Dist. 59's boundaries.

A unit district would place the high schools and elementary schools under one school board and administration. Currently Dist. 59 is one of seven elementary school districts in the Dist. 214 area.

ANYONE AFFECTED by the proposed unit district may present evidence at the hearings at Elk Grove, 500 Elk Grove Blvd., Elk Grove Village.

After all interested parties have been heard, Martwick will make a recommendation on the petition's request to the state schools' superintendent.

The state superintendent will decide whether there will be an election on the issue. If an election is held, only Dist. 59 residents will be eligible to vote.

Ruling sought on school aid

A court decision on the Illinois Office of Education's interpretation of state-aid limitations for school districts is being sought by High School Dist. 214.

The Dist. 214 Board of Education approved filing a suit with other high school districts to get a clarification on the state education office's opinion.

State law limits the additional amount of state aid a district may receive each year to 25 per cent more than the amount the district received the previous year.

THE STATE OFFICE is figuring the limitation for additional state aid on the actual amount school districts received in state aid last year instead of the amount districts would have received if the state could fully fund state aid, Robert Weber, associate superintendent for business services, said.

Weber said Dist. 214 officials believe the percentage formula should use the amount of state funding a district is qualified to receive, not the actual amount received.

Because a limited amount of state money was available for state aid last year, districts received about 95 per cent of the money they were entitled to receive.

WEBER SAID THE state's interpretation of the funding limits would cost Dist. 214 $123,000 in general state aid for the 1976-77 school year. Dist. 214 anticipates receiving $10.8 million in state aid.

Luncheon and the theater is the agenda for women who wish to participate in the park district's feminine program Sept. 22.

McDonald to introduce vandal law

An ordinance to make parents responsible for youthful, vandalism in unincorporated Cook County and county forest preserves will be introduced in October to the Cook County Board by suburban-Comm. Mary McDonald.

Mrs. McDonald, a Republican, said Wednesday she is preparing the ordinance, modeled after similar statutes adopted by suburban municipalities, with the cooperation of suburban officials and Democratic County Board Pres. George W. Dunne.

Mrs. McDonald said the ordinance will call for a fine of up to $500 to be imposed on parents whose children commit vandalism and require the parents to pay for the damage.

She said those working on the ordinance with her have disagreed over whether the parental fine should be imposed for a first offense or whether parents should receive a warning on the first offense and a fine if their child is caught the second time.

MRS. McDONALD SAID "I will probably go for the tougher ordinance." She said the village of Doerfield has had a year's experience with an anti-vandalism ordinance which provides for fines on the first offense and "they have had 300 first offenses and not one second offense."

Northwest suburban municipalities have been discussing anti-vandalism ordinances for some time. Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect and other communities have adopted parent responsibility ordinances.

Mrs. McDonald said in addition to urging the county board to adopt an anti-vandalism ordinance, she plans to meet with Chief Circuit Court Judge John Boyle and suburban judges to discuss enforcement of the ordinance.

Mrs. McDonald acknowledged that it is unusual for a suburban Republican commissioner to draw up an ordinance since most proposals come from Dunne. She said, however, "I've informed all the commissioners of what I'm doing because I want everybody to know what is going on. I think doing it this way I'll be able to get bipartisan support."

Legislation moves to Senate

House OKs school-aid, tax speedup bills

by STEVE BROWN

The Illinois House adjourned in chaos Wednesday after passing a series of bills to change the state school-aid formula and speed up the collection of certain state sales and income tax receipts.

However, the effect of the action was clouded because the House voted to delay the effective dates of the tax collection bills until July 1, 1977.

The legislation still must be passed by the Illinois Senate, which returns to Springfield today. If the Senate finds the necessary votes, the House will need to go back into session Saturday to vote to concur with the Senate action. The delay in effective dates was required because the bills did not receive the necessary three-fifths majority needed for passage.

THE CONFUSION in the House action Wednesday was very similar to what occurred in June. When the regular legislative session adjourned, the lawmakers had approved the formula changes but had failed to pass the tax speedup bills.

Gov. Daniel Walker used his amendatory veto power to delay enactment of the formula changes until the legislature acted on the tax bills. He said the $95 million the state will receive from the tax bills was needed to fund the formula changes. He called the lawmakers into special session to act on the bills.

State Rep. Virginia MacDonald, R-Arlington Heights, said the House action Wednesday may amount to nothing more than a parliamentary move to get the bills to the Senate. She said the Senate would probably amend the effective dates on the tax bills to make the plan start immediately. But that will require another House session and more "yea" votes than were mustered Wednesday.

House members were shouting objections to a plan to return to Springfield Saturday when the chamber shut down for the day.

Republican lawmakers dropped their solid opposition to the legislation, which has been held up for more than a week, and supported the formula changes by 121-41 vote with four representatives voting present and 11 absent.

STATE REP. Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, and State Rep. Richard Mugallan, D-Palatine, were among the Democrats who opposed the formula changes.

Mrs. Chapman said she opposed the bills because it would have hurt six of the seven school districts in her legislative district.

"I voted for the school children in my district," she added.

The vote on the tax speedup bills received more divided support from both Republicans and Democrats. Locally, State Representatives John Porter, R-Evanston; Harold Katz, D-Glenview; Mugallan; Chapman; Aaron Jaffe, D-Skokie; Ted Leverenz, D-Maywood; Jack Williams, D-Franklin Park; and Edward Bluthardt, D-Schiller Park, supported the measure.

State Representatives John Friedland, R-Elgin; Donald L. Totten, R-Hoffman Estates; MacDonald; and John Carroll, R-Park Ridge voted for a single tax speedup bill that passed with the necessary three-fifths majority.

With the action shifting to the Senate, local members of that chamber become the focus of attention. State Sen. David J. Rogner, R-Mount Prospect, said he doubts whether there will be enough votes to pass the measure in the Senate.

THE QUESTION of the accelerated tax collection plan became a political football as a number of candidates, including Sen. of State Michael J. Howlett, the Democratic candidate for governor, called on his Republican opponent, James R. Thompson, to back the tax speedup plan.

Thompson resisted the challenge until Tuesday and then offered only a limited endorsement, saying he supported the move to give extra money to education but for no other state spending.

The changes in the school aid formula allows school districts to stop rolling back their real estate tax as the amount of state aid increases, changes the formula for computing attendance for the purposes of receiving state aid and modifies the formula for penalties assessed school districts that fail to meet the minimum number of class days.

The early-closing penalty change was sought by Chicago lawmakers because Chicago schools would have to pay about $33 million to the state for closing 16 days early last year.

Fly paper supply low? Visit this old feed store

Morning crawled slowly into the old feed store where thousands of shoe and boot wearers have beaten down the once-proud wooden plank floor, perhaps since red men and white men watched each other with caution across the vanishing plains.

The new day, already a few hours old but still cool, sneaked atop sacks of dog and horse feed, past large bags of sunflower seeds and down one aisle where farmers can select from brown or white salt bricks.

Saddles and stirrups, combs and mane treatments, belts and buckles, crops and brushes; they all fill out this old feed store, either hung upon the walls, tucked into tight corners or suspended from the high ceiling.

Emil Reuter greeted morning without a fuss one day this week. He looked out upon it from behind the old counter of Main Supplies feed store, which Emil, 58, and his younger brother, Leroy, operate near Barrington.

Morning began to crawl inside when Emil and Leroy swung the doors open at 8 a.m. It brought the promise of another fine late summer day, and most likely cash-paying customers, too. Some did pay by check.

A WOMAN paid her bill, but left without any goods. She had placed a large order that would be delivered later. Emil said goodbye and then turned toward another customer.

"Can I help you?" Emil asked the visitor.

One small white card exchanged hands. Emil studied the card, then placed it on the old counter alongside the beaten-to-death spiral notebook. Sheets of paper inside that old notebook contain feed and supply order records.

"Well, this old building's got to be close to 100 years old," Emil said. "Started out as a farmer's grocery store. Meat and such."

"The farmers used to haul their milk down here. Far as I can tell, there was a millwork shop in here once. An antique shop, too."

"That's as much as I can tell you," Emil said. "What was in here before that I don't know."

EMIL AND Leroy started their feed and supply store business eight years ago. Emil had worked for a lumber supply company and Leroy had been a painter before their business venture.

More than just feed and farm supplies are stuffed inside the old white building at Northwest Highway and Hart Road.

There also is fly paper. It is the good, old sticky kind that Grandmother always hung in her fruit and vegetable cellar.

"You can't hardly get that stuff no more," Emil said. "But we can. We know where to get it. It's just sticky. They light on it and there they stay."

By all observations, Emil was right. A length of that yellow fly paper hung from one of two light fixtures above their old counter, silent proof that many flying pests had gone to their eternal reward alongside the Great Fly.

Today

"That strip has been there quite a while," said Leroy, who had just returned from an errand. "The glue is dry. They hang there as long as the glue is good."

NUMEROUS "Improved" fly killers glut the market today. Emil and Leroy stock some of those products, too.

"There was that other type," Leroy said. "What did they call that, Snip Strips?"

"Man," Emil said, "we used to hang that across the door at night. We'd come in the next morning and the floor would be just black."

"Flies would land on the strip, absorb the stuff through their feet and then fall in a line," Leroy said.

Leroy said that he needed to make a trip to the hardware store. Emil began to take a few telephone calls. That's when I noticed the sign.

Emil or Leroy had affixed it near their very high ceiling alongside a window where many flies were in morning convention.

"NATIONAL HORSE WORMING MONTH," the sign announced.

"Have you wormed your horse in the past three months?" the sign asked in smaller letters.

IT SEEMED to be such a strange sign, certainly not like anything that had ever struck my attention before.

"Well," Emil said, "you do have to worm them."

But when is horse worming month?

"Most any month," Emil said.

Emil talked briefly about his old store just before the woman arrived. She would need to order 100 pounds of dry dog food, 48 pounds of canned dog food, 20 pounds of cat chow and 50 pounds of kitty litter.

"People come in here and say they haven't seen a store like this in years," said Emil, who drinks his coffee from an old white cup. "An old country store, that's what this is. There's nothing fancy about it."

The woman approached the old counter and placed her large order. Emil scratched numbers onto paper. "What you're running up is my standard order," the woman said.

Emil said that her standard order would cost $32.50. "I can remember when it used to run $26 and something," the woman said. "Don't know how many years ago that was."

THE WOMAN walked outside. Emil lugged the heavy bags outside his old store and placed them into her car. Then he walked back inside and began to discuss the hay.

Hay is very expensive this year. Summer rain clouds have not been kind to northern farmers. Emil and Leroy make their own hay in nearby fields.

"It all depends upon the rains," Emil said. "This year has been rotten. Even the lawns are dead."

Emil talked some more. Leroy returned, and then Emil departed to rake the dry hay field.

Another woman walked inside Main Supplies. She approached the old counter. Leroy stood near the box of old-style fly papers, the kind that the more flies there are, the more you get.

The new customer asked whether Leroy sold rabbit food pellets. "Yes," Leroy said.

"Only have to feed one rabbit," the woman said. "The other one died. Don't know what happened. It was sick, but it was getting better."

LEROY LOOKED at this woman. He spoke quietly. "It couldn't have been getting that much better," he said.

"Oh," the woman protested, "but the color was coming back. It was yellow before."

The hour was correct to end this splendid morning visit. Emil already had gone to rake his dry hay.

Now Leroy went in search of rabbit food pellets for the woman whose other rabbit had died.

"Got to get to work," I volunteered toward Leroy while clutching one pen and one notebook, in my palms.

"Yeah," Leroy agreed. He stooped very low and began to grapple with two enormous bags of rabbit food pellets. "That work is something else."

In 1977 National Merit program

53 area students make scholarship semifinals

Fifty-three Northwest suburban students have been named semifinalists in the 1977 National Merit Scholarship Program.

These students are among 15,000 nationwide who will compete for about 3,850 merit scholarships to be awarded next spring.

In order to become finalists, semifinalists must be fully endorsed by their high schools, present high school records that substantiate their academic standings and confirm their high qualifying test scores with a second examination.

MORE THAN ONE million students from more than 17,000 high schools entered the 1977 merit program by Aptitude Test/National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test. Semifinalists are the highest scoring students in each state.

Finalists will compete for at least 1,000 National Merit $1,000 Scholarships. Each finalist will compete with all other finalists in individual states for these scholarships, which are allocated on a state representational basis. The scholarships are supported by grants from businesses and industries. Finalists will also be considered for about 2,850 four-year merit scholarships.

This is the 22nd National Merit competition. About 45,800 students have won scholarships valued at more than $124 million.

Your vote could decide the election, so register! I need you!!!

The way we see it

You must be registered to vote

Time is running out for persons not registered to vote in the November general election. Only one more day remains for registration at local village and township halls.

Registration at the Cook County Building in Chicago remains open until Sept. 27, and there will be a special one day voter registration in the precinct polling places on Oct. 5. But the local registration still remains the most convenient option.

Voters who have moved since the last election should register again. County officials have made an effort to simplify the process by offering registration at local village and township halls.

In a democracy, the most fundamental right held by the people is that of voting. This right also represents an important responsibility.

Democracy cannot function without the participation of the people in the process of selecting leaders.

This principle cannot be put into action unless a person has first registered to vote.

A presidential election year always takes on special importance, because the voters are not only picking their representatives in both Springfield and Washington, but they also are selecting the man who will set the general tone for the nation.

Here in Illinois, voters also will select a new governor.

All of these positions are important and affect the lives of every citizen.

The process all begins with voter registration.

A reasonable plan to end library controversy

We urge the Mount Prospect Village Board to amend the 1976-77 budget to assure that adequate funds will be available to run the new Mount Prospect library scheduled to open next month.

The key vote in the compromise agreement between the village board and library board is expected Sept. 21 from Trustee Leo Floros who, after months of firm resistance to additional library funds, now says he is pleased with the budget agreement. The compromise reinstates about half of the funds trimmed by the village and at the same time forces the reopening on Saturdays of the library which was closed by library officials as an economy move when the financing was in doubt.

We believe both groups originally had the best interests of Mount Prospect residents in mind, but as the financial controversy unfolded, both sides became emotional and occasionally unreasonable.

The library board said the funding of the new $3.2 million library building, 14 E. Busse Ave., was insufficient to provide library users with an adequate selection of books and adequate staffing in a facility three times as large as the present building.

The village board, faced with increased taxes and a hold-the-line budget promise during the last campaign, said the library request was extravagant.

After months of heated negotiations, this compromise should end the feud. With the bitter disagreements behind them, both groups should concern themselves with other issues and concerns of Mount Prospect residents.

Nostalgically, we leave logjams to legislatures

Another era of American history is coming to an end as the last log drive on the Kennebec River in Maine comes to a conclusion.

No more will the mighty lum-berjack ride the rapid river, peavey hook and pickaroon in hand, to guide massive pieces of timber from forest to the sawmill.

Issues of the environment and economy caused the demise of river logging. Lumber companies found it cheaper to use trucks, and environmentalists argued the process affected the ecology of rivers.

We may be better off because of the change, but whenever a tradition that helped to develop this nation vanishes, a moment must be taken to recall the efforts that went into making the country great.

The peoples' choice versus people

WASHINGTON (NEA) —Contrary to the best image of government, Rep. Robert L. F. Sikes will be coming back to Congress next year. The Florida Democrat won his party's primary last week and as usual will have no Republican opposition in the general election. Unless his constituents get religion, and boycott the November polls unanimously, the aging warlord is guaranteed his 19th legislative term.

Hence justice loses again. Wrong triumphs. Democracy weakens. It is not just that Robert Sikes deserves reelection less than anyone in Washington, it is also the manner in which his victory will come. He is one of the few congressmen ever to be reprimanded by his peers for official irregularities, he is widely suspected of having regularly used his office for personal gain, yet there is no one in his district willing to challenge him in the November ballot.

He is not, of course, the only federal lawmaker without opposition this fall. By latest count there are 25 Democrats (including one senator) and six Republicans who have no general election opponents. Add to this the 150 or more legislators of both parties who have only token opposition and the nation is faced with the sad fact that about 40 per cent of November's contests are merely formal exercises. Small wonder reform in Washington remains a thing of a remote future.

Who are these automatic returnees? In many instances they are good men and women whose service is such as to discourage challenge from newcomers. Just as often, however, they are questionable stiffos who are locked into power by political machines and ignorant voters. Sikes is in the latter category. Actually, he leads the category. His story darkens a candle on America's Bicentennial birthday cake.

Sikes came to Congress in 1941 from the panhandle of Florida. The war was on, and he was swift enough to realize benefit from it for himself and his district. He hopped aboard the military bandwagon and turned it in the direction of his supporters. In 36 years of effort Sikes has remade Florida's First District into a kind of armed camp with nine major military installations, which now receives about $500 million in annual subsidies from the nation's defense budget.

Undoubtedly this has been good for the folks west of the Apalachicola. As chairman of the House Military Construction Subcommittee, Sikes has become "Mr. Military" at the Pentagon, and his every wish has rained profit on his constituents. The average congressional district receives about $7 million a year in military construction money, but Florida's First receives seven times this sum. Those who have voted for Sikes all these years have voted for their own bank accounts.

But while his people have prospered, Rep. Sikes has grown rich. According to public records he has used his federal and military influence for various personal advantages. He has been a major stockholder in a U.S. naval base bank which he helped establish; he has held substantial holdings in Fairchild Industries (while voting for $170 million worth of federal finances for the military contractor); and despite the rules of the House, he has sponsored legislation to enhance the value of land in which he has had a financial interest.

It was for these reasons Sikes was reprimanded by his colleagues recently. It was a mild rebuke; congressmen dislike punishing their own, for who knows whose turn is next? Still, Sikes is disgraced.

And yet back home he remains unbeatable. He rolled over a primary challenger with 75 per cent of the vote. And in November he will appear alone on the ballot. This says far less about Sikes than it does about those who defer to Sikes. Never mind his ethics, his misuse of power, his breaking of legislative rules; as long as he can keep the money flowing from Washington to Pensacola, the people are blind.

And so it is in many other congressional districts. The legislature is crammed with the corrupt, the incompetent and the arrogant, yet 90 per cent of those who stand for reelection this year will be reelected, because that's the way the people choose it.

It's chilling. The noise you hear is the restless bodies in the graves of the founders.

Heart Association is grateful to all who participated in swim

On behalf of the Chicago Heart Association and its five suburban divisions, I would like to thank the swimmers and other residents of the Northwest Suburban communities for making the First Annual Swim For Heart a success by raising $57,000 to help fight heart disease.

This success is due primarily to the outstanding efforts of the children and adults who swam for heart, the generous sponsors who pledged their support and to the extensive press coverage by The Herald. A special thank you is due the Suburban Parks and Recreation Association (SPRA) for sponsoring the swim and to the participating park districts for their cooperation and for providing, on a continuing basis, recreation programs such as swimming which provide exercise to help condition the heart and vascular systems of the young and old alike.

Results of the Swim For Heart have just become available due to the two to three week period following the swim in which the swimmers collected and turned in their pledges based on the number of laps they swam.

A sincere, heartfelt, thank you to each swimmer, sponsor and volunteer for their commitment to the efforts of the Chicago Heart Association and its North Cook County Division in its fight to reduce the incidence of heart diseases which kill more people each year than all other causes of death combined. Swim For Heart dollars, as with all Heart Fund contributions, help in the fight by supporting heart related research, professional and lay education and community programs.

To help express our gratitude for their individual efforts and for personally demonstrating the merits of exercise which helps condition the heart and vascular system, each swimmer will receive a Chicago Heart Association Special Merit Certificate.

From one Heart Association volunteer to another, congratulations on a job well done.

Rolf M. Gunnar
President
Chicago Heart Association.

Worthy of note

Tuesday evening, Sept. 7, about 9:30 p.m., our car stalled in front of the Lutheran Church of the Holy Spirit.

My husband and I and our two children would like to extend our appreciation to two young men by the names of Nick Gattorna and his friend, Jim, who stopped to offer their assistance, and also to Mr. Ron Leaf who passed by and also tried to help.

After all efforts failed, we thanked the two young men and offered them a few dollars for their effort, which they refused to accept. Thereafter, Mr. Leaf was kind enough to offer us a ride home.

We feel this is a marvelous example of people helping others which one so seldom hears or reads about and should be acknowledged. It was a refreshing experience for us and we shall not forget their kindness.

BIG BUSINESS

"There must be a misunderstanding, Sir. All I need is another file cabinet."

For failing to take preventive steps

'Office crime executives' fault'

Law enforcement officials place the blame for white-collar crime squarely on the shoulders of neglectful management, and say it's up to business leaders to curb the $40-million-a-year thievery.

Corporate and police representatives and prosecuting attorneys berate preventive steps against employee crime, and refusing to prosecute the criminals they catch.

"If you're meeting a payroll, the potential for crime is there," Edward S. Donnell, chief executive officer for Montgomery Ward & Co., Inc., told businessmen attending the Chicago Assn. of Commerce and Industry seminar, "Business and Industry — Targets of Crime," in Chicago Wednesday morning.

"It's either a kid gloves or gloves-off strategy" in fighting crime, Donnell told an audience of 200 at the Pick-Congress Hotel.

IRA HARRIS, director of preventive programs of the Chicago Police Dept., slammed businessmen's apathy toward white collar crime, saying at least 30 per cent of business failures each year are caused by dishonest employees.

Norris A. Lynch, director of consumer goods and services of the U. S. Dept. of Commerce, in citing an example of white collar crime, said the grocery industry loses an average $600 million to thieves yearly, yet fewer than 30 per cent of grocers keep records of losses attributable to crime.

When an instance of white collar crime is discovered, corporations usually are hesitant about notifying police, seminar speakers agreed.

Harris said "a vast majority" of white collar crime goes unreported because:

- Executives fear costly civil suits should they openly accuse an employee of deceit.
- A firm wishes to conceal negligence by its management, which failed to prevent the crime.
- The culprit, once caught, agrees to pay restitution, and is dismissed, often without a bad mark on his reference. Such persons usually move on to unsuspecting firms and resume their criminal activity, Harris said.

• The firm fears adverse publicity if a crime is made public.

Harris recommended that executives identify and eliminate irresponsible persons; pursue investigations into suspicious employee activity; reject white-collar crime as merely a part of doing business; and make use of local law enforcement agencies in setting up crime prevention programs.

In setting up a crime resistance program, Donnell suggested businessmen:

- Understand the nature and scope of their security problem.
- Keep abreast of crime prevention techniques.
- Make security a top-level management objective, and implement a security policy at all levels of a corporation, from the boardroom down to the loading dock.
- Follow through on prosecutions of offenders, especially in instances of bribery.
- Don't fire a first offender for a petty offense; "take the risk of helping."

Ford parts may be hard to obtain during strike

by TONI GINETTI

Owners of Ford automobiles could have difficulty obtaining parts for vehicle repairs if the strike by the United Auto Workers against the Ford Motor Co. is a lengthy one, area Ford dealers said Wednesday.

The strike against the country's second largest car manufacturer idled some 7,220 members in the Chicago area Wednesday, including the 180 at the Ford parts depot in Melrose Park. Parts for all Fords are warehoused at the depot, which was shut down by the strike along with Ford's assembly plant at 12600 S. Torrence Ave., Chicago, and Ford's stamping plant in East Chicago Heights.

NEW CAR sales managers at seven models already are on hand, but parts deliveries on all models have been stopped due to the strike.

"That will affect all Ford dealers because we all get our parts from the same place," Steve VerVynck of Woodfield Ford in Schaumburg said Wednesday. "It will be a matter of a dealer exchange program and whoever has the better inventory (of parts) will be in the best position to hold out," he said.

Paul Meegan of Cass Ford in Des Plaines said the lack of parts delivery could hurt car repair services but he said his dealership has a 90-day supply of new 1977s already on hand.

Both Meegan and Patrick Simmons of Schmerler Ford in Elk Grove Village said a long strike is not expected. "We have heard passed down through the grapevine that it could be settled Monday," Meegan said. "It should be a very short strike."

"We have not heard anything from Detroit, but I would imagine after tomorrow when the brunt of things have been felt we'll get some word," Simmons said. "But nobody's going to panic."

WALLY SHEPHERD of Fallon

Ford in Arlington Heights said he does not anticipate a long strike. "It's been business as usual here," he said. A spokesman for Chale Ford Inc. in Arlington Heights said the strike is not expected to cause any immediate problems. "We've got 1977s here now and service mechanics are not on strike at all," he said.

At the three area Ford plants Wednesday, striking UAW members walked picket lines throughout the day but officials reported no incidents.

Robert Harnar, regional public relations manager for Ford, said both sides plan to return to the bargaining table Monday.

HIE ADDED NEW car deliveries are planned to continue on schedule. "We have a 60-day supply of new cars nationally and that is split between 1976 and 1977 models," he said.

Harnar said servicing of emergency vehicles will not be a problem but supplying parts to dealerships will be hampered by the strike.

"The management will be able to service and man the parts depot for emergency vehicles, but we are a team management operation and if a dealer runs out of parts it will be a problem," he said.

Ford's Chicago assembly plant employs 3,370 and the East Chicago Heights stamping plant 3,670.

VW signs papers for U.S. plant

Volkswagen of West Germany Wednesday signed a final master agreement to locate its first North American automobile assembly plant in New Stanton, Pa., to better compete with other foreign importers. Gov. Milton J. Shapp signed for the Commonwealth and handed the first $8 million check of a $40 million state agency loan to Siegfried Hohn, VW's top fiscal officer, who signed for Volkswagen. The plant, located in New Stanton, about 40 miles southeast of Pittsburgh's mills which will supply the steel, initially will employ about 2,000 persons and be increased to 5,000 within two years, according to Volkswagen. In addition, state officials said an estimated 23,000 to 35,000 workers will be needed in various support industries.

Steel firms layoff workers

A "soft" steel market has caused at least three producers, including United States Steel Corp., to announce temporary layoffs. U.S. Steel has laid off "several hundred" workers at its Gary, Ind., works, while Bethlehem Steel Corp., has shut down a blast furnace at its Sparrows Point, Md., facility. And Kaiser Steel Corp. said it has begun laying off about 400 workers at its Fontana, Calif., plant because of a falloff in steel orders.

An unknown factor at this point could be the United Auto Workers strike against the Ford Motor Co. A lengthy walkout could hurt companies which supply steel to the automaker. Edgar B. Speer, chairman of U.S. Steel, said the company's third quarter "will be a little flatter than anticipated, but the last half (of the year) should measure up to forecasts."

MID-WEST AUTOMATION Inc. of Skokie has purchased a 70,000-square-foot site on Holbrook Drive in Wheeling. A 17,000-square-foot fully air-conditioned building designed by Tholander Nelson Associates will be built by D. J. Volo & Co.

He has served as an instructor there for 13 years. The Advanced Management Institute is a school for advanced training in management, open to practicing managers in business and industry.

Stocks make up early losses; Dow gains

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market overcame early selling for a small gain Wednesday on the New York Stock Exchange in a confusing news background.

The Dow Jones Industrial average, off nearly four points at the outset, finished up 0.67 to 979.31. It had been ahead two points at one time. On Tuesday, the blue-chip average lost 4.65 points.

Advances edged declines, 692 to 639, among the 1,866 issues traded. Volume totaled 17,570,000 shares, up from 15,550,000 traded Tuesday.

ANALYSTS SAID some buying was sparked by Alan Greenspan, the chief White House economic spokesman, saying that the recovery was based on a "firm foundation" and should continue.

Greenspan said the "most recent evidence suggests another acceleration in the pace of the recovery is probably now getting under way." James T. Lynn, director of the Office of Management and Budget, agreed with Greenspan.

The nationwide strike by 170,000 United Auto Workers union members against Ford began early in the day and generally, traders discounted the walkout. The length of the strike now is the major uncertainty confronting investors and the economy.

AMERICAN TELEPHONE & Telegraph, the most widely held stock in the nation, gained 5/8 to 60-3/4 after the company reported record quarterly earnings of $1.60 a share.

Reserve Oil & Gas topped the active list, up 1-3/8 to 15 1/4 on 270,700 shares.

Gillette was the second most active issue, off 3/4 to 30-1/8 on 221,800 shares. Pacific Gas Electric followed, up 3/8 to 22-7/8 on 203,400 shares.

Prices closed slightly lower in moderate trading on the American Stock Exchange. The Amex market value index lost 0.10 to 102.23. There was no change in the average price of an Amex share. Declines topped advances, 283 to 253. Volume totaled 1,690,000 shares, compared with 1,560,000 traded Tuesday.

Step aside, golfers, housing projects are your neighbors

by LYNN ASINOF

Take a golf course. Now add the rising expense of property taxes, fertilizer, gasoline and labor. Chances are that you'll end up with a real estate development.

This trend doesn't mean the end of golf courses in the Northwest suburbs, although one or two already have disappeared. It just means more and more condominiums and townhouses are taking their place next to the fairway.

A typical example is the Old Orchard Country Club in Mount Prospect, originally proposed by Hollywood Builders and now being built by Falcon Development Co. Inc. When completed, there will be 2,100 condominium and townhouse units on the 205-acre course.

To accommodate the housing, five holes on the course were completely changed. The biggest change, however, was in the golf course's tax bill and the money made by selling the land.

"THERE'S A LITTLE give and take on each side," Jim Johnson, assistant manager and pro at Old Orchard, said of the double usage. "It really hasn't hurt the over-all play of the course, although it's a little shorter in length."

The Rob Roy Golf Course, just down the road from Old Orchard, originally was proposed for a similar type of development. The Mount Prospect Village Board turned down the high density project, and developers now want to build houses that will wipe out the course.

Bob McDonald, a member of the family that owns Rob Roy, said he liked the idea of being able to preserve the golf course. "We tried to do that and Mount Prospect voted it down. It would have been the same thing as Old Orchard," he said.

McDonald said the problem isn't that you can't make a living from a golf course. It's just that the return on the property is small compared to what it could be if the land was developed.

TO ILLUSTRATE HIS point, he said it would take 200 acres to build a new golf course. At about $20,000 an acre, the cost of land alone would be $4 million. "And you haven't even done anything yet," he said.

That is one reason there are few private golf courses being built these days.

"Most of the new courses are either municipal golf courses or being developed as part of a real estate project," said Denny Davenport, assistant executive director of the Chicago District Golf Assn.

National Golf Foundation statistics show that 75 new golf courses and additions were built in the first six months of 1976. Twenty-nine were part of real estate developments.

IN ADDITION, eight executive golf courses, which are shorter than regulation courses, were built during the same time. Four were part of real estate developments.

"Some courses changed from private to municipal, and some changed from daily fee to a municipal course," said Donald Rossi, executive director of the National Golf Foundation.

Rossi said municipally owned courses do not have to worry about paying property taxes, one of the biggest headaches of golf course operators.

"The higher the property taxes go up, the harder it is to keep all of the amenities going," Rossi said. "It's a problem nationally. There is much work being done trying to get golf courses in a different tax bracket because of that."

SOME OF THAT work is being done by the National Assn. of Public Golf Courses, a group still in its formative stages. It is designed to bring course owners together to discuss common problems.

"You've got to remember, when you start being hit with property taxes, the cost of fertilizer and the cost of water — there's strength in numbers. That's why they organized," Rossi said.

Golf is a growing sport, which means there is a growing demand for facilities. Davenport said the growth spurt of the 1960's has leveled off, but said the public interest in the sport has made golfers more demanding.

"The golfing public is much more aware of what quality conditions are around a golf course," he said.

"They want not only a good course but good clubhouse facilities."

A COMBINATION golf course-housing development, therefore, cannot afford to skimp on its facilities.

At Mission Hills Country Club near Northbrook, developer Eugene R. Corley spent some $3 million rebuilding the golf course before beginning construction of more than 800 townhomes and condominiums.

Many people who live at Mission Hills are not golfers, but marketing director Win Gould said the open space and greenery created by the course makes the property attractive to nongolfers as well.

Davenport said some golf purists don't like to play on "real estate courses," but said most people don't see much difference.

"It doesn't change the quality of the game. It just changes the type of shots required by a golfer playing an 18-hole round," he said. "It somewhat limits a player in the number of clubs he can use in a round."

Seeking jobs for members

Building unions approve cuts in pensions, salary

NEW YORK (LENS) — With unemployment among organized members of the building trades running from 25-50 per cent, leaders of local building unions have reluctantly agreed to reductions in the pay and pensions that they have won over recent years in order to obtain jobs for their rank and file.

In New York City, the unions have signed a contract for federally-supported urban rehabilitation projects involving a cut of 25 per cent in wages and pensions. As rehabilitation work now accounts for most of the jobs available, the unions felt that they had no choice. A similar deal has been negotiated by unions in Philadelphia.

In Michigan the president of a unionized construction firm negotiated a deal with local unions that brought an end to featherbedding. The unions ceded power over the size of crews needed and gave up coffee breaks and travel pay rather than take a cut in wages, thus enabling the firm to beat the non-union competition for a $10 million building contract awarded by Shell Oil.

REPORTS THAT other local branches are making unpublished concessions, including pledges against strikes, as a means of getting more work has led the national building trade unions to examine the extent and nature of the erosion in contracts across the country.

Why the building unions are weak

Historically, the building crafts have been among the oldest and strongest of union organizations in the United States. They have also been faithful to the precept of Samuel Gompers, the patron saint of organized labor in America, who insisted that unions should concentrate on getting more — in wages and working conditions — rather than on political power.

During the late building boom of holy memory, the construction workers won enormous benefits that made them labor aristocrats, at least in terms of wages and pensions. But construction, both commercial and residential, has been in the doldrums for several years. It has not revived noticeably with the recovery in overall economic activity, and many of the declining number of jobs available have gone to non-union workers who not only work for lower wages but for longer hours.

NOW UNION branches are themselves engaging in price cutting. Given the wholesale unemployment — and underemployment — in the construction industry, these concessions are not being opposed by the national leadership. Yet the heads of the building crafts unions are concerned that their branches may be forced into excessive concessions by depressed conditions.

They also fear that the local unions might come to special terms with an individual contracting firm, which would give it an unfair advantage in bidding on jobs.

The crafts unions have long sought uniformity in contracts on a regional basis. Like wage rates in New York and work rules in Michigan, uniformity is no longer sacrosanct. In retrospect, the unions appear to have won too much in the great boom, enabling nonunion labor to grab more and more of the dwindling jobs in the field. If the unions are to keep their hold on the industry, they will probably have to accept more concessions before a new level of uniformity in the industry is reached.

Retirement villages offer busy life

For modern golden agers, retirement need not be the end. It can be the beginning of a new way of life — particularly when they find a new place in the sun in a so-called "retirement community."

These special areas provide richer recreational fields. Activity, rather than passivity, is their way of life, according to a recent nationwide survey of retired couples conducted by the Family Housing Bureau of Chicago Title Insurance Company.

The survey shows that one out of four couples who relocated chose to move to a retirement community. Of those choosing retirement communities, 94 per cent are happy with the move and probably would make the same move again.

The chief reasons given for the high level of satisfaction among retirees living in retirement communities are the sunny climate and an abundance of recreational activities. Also important factors are a small town atmosphere (often near an in the retiree's original home town or birthplace) and proximity to friends and relatives, water and beaches, other retired people or friendly neighbors, and shopping facilities.

Summarizing the situation for the vast majority, a Fort Meyers, Fla. respondent commented, "We like the weather, the people around us, and the area."

ONE OUT OF FIVE retirees respondents report no major problems. About 18 per cent indicate some financial problems with the chief culprits being inflation and the limitations of a fixed income. About 13 per cent complained of poor health while an equal number complained of missing family or friends.

Another responder characterized a frequently mentioned problem: "I don't have enough time to do everything." The thought was echoed by another Florida couple who listed 10 major hobbies and activities, including growing tropical vegetables and fruits.

The 6 per cent who say they would not choose their retirement community again give one primary reason — they miss their family and friends.

The surveyed retirees living in retirement communities have overwhelmingly selected the warm, sunny southern and western states — specifically Florida, California and Arizona.

Two-thirds of those who relocated to retirement communities moved more than 500 miles from their former residences. This appears to be a mixed blessing, with many praises for sunshine, but a few regrets about leaving "the place where our roots are."

FOUR OUT OF five own rather than rent their residences in retirement communities. Those purchasing dwellings split almost down the middle between new dwellings and previously occupied ones. Almost one half or 46 per cent chose single family homes, while one out of three opted for mobile homes or trailers.

According to the Family Housing Bureau survey, retirees generally seem to prefer a quieter environment — but one that provides maximum leisure-time outlets in the form of social and recreational activities. Besides the expected shuffleboard, golf and card playing, unusual retirement activities abound.

For example, the emphasis on natural or rural settings of many retirement communities results in such reported hobbies as shelling, rock collecting, bird house building and studying earth sciences.

Some specialized activities also emerge, such as "search and rescue work" for the Coast Guard Auxiliary, editing a mobile park publication, lawn mower repair, antique car judging and lawn bowling.

Others reveal talents in retirement they may not have had time or inclination to develop earlier such as glass cutting, painting china, graphoanalysis, head embroidery and, as one inventive respondent described it, "Making things out of practically anything."

Study apartment investment carefully

"Look before you leap." Advice that is as good as it is ancient.

And — miracle of miracles — some people actually follow it!

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL:

I am tentatively planning on purchasing an apartment building as an investment. Can you recommend any literature concerning purchasing, managing and maintaining such a property? I would let an attorney handle the legal aspects of ownership and tenancy.

As a faithful reader of your column and with much respect for your professional knowledge, I ask the next question: do you feel this is a good investment in the present state of the economy and for the near, predictable, future? — Mr. L. S. (E. Stroudsburg, Pa.)

ANSWER: I want to compliment you on approaching this investment cautiously. The normal tendency is to go ahead and do it, and then seek confirmation that it was the right thing to do.

Apartments as income-producing property are an on-again, off-again situation and, unfortunately, it can't be generalized. Nationally, the market currently is a little mushy, but there are obviously many communities where the demand remains strong and vacancy rates are comfortable (10 per cent or under).

To find out what your situation is locally will require a little sleuthing. If your community doesn't have an apartment association (of owners), then check with local banks and savings and loan associations and with the promotion-and-research department of your newspaper which normally has this sort of data on hand.

Check local "for rent" advertising, too. If it is fairly commonplace to find ads offering enticements to tenants (first month's rent free for instance) you can bet your bottom dollar that the market is very mushy.

Most of the better books on real estate available at your library have at least a couple of chapters devoted to apartments. I recommend North and Ring's "Real Estate Principles and Practices" which has chapters on "Property Management," "Leases," "Real Estate Advertising," "Property Insurance" and so forth.

by Don G. Campbell

You might also want to get a current copy of the annual "Experience Exchange," published by The Institute of Real Estate Management (155 E. Superior St., Chicago, Ill., 60611, $35), which has a wealth of information on apartment income and expenses broken down by city and category.

Good luck.

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL:

I plan to build a house in the near future for which I will need approximately $50,000 in additional financing. Please let me have your recommendations on the following: (1) Should I sell part of my $100,000 stock portfolio and pay cash for the house? (2) Should I get a mortgage to pay for the house? (3) Should I use a combination of 1 and 2? — Mr. J. K. P. (Tucson, Ariz.)

ANSWER: Let's try No. 3. I'm a little baffled as to what sort of house this is going to be that requires $50,000 in "additional" financing. How much do you have on hand now, and what percentage of the total cost of the house does this "on hand" and "additional" money, combined, represent? I find myself envisioning a $500,000 establishment.

I don't know your age or what your income is so it's a little difficult for me to suggest how deeply you should dip into your stock portfolio. I think you have to work this out backwards.

By all means, plan on financing it with a mortgage, but determine first how much you can afford in monthly payments. Once you have this figure it is a simple matter to compute how much you are going to have to pay "down" to arrive at the size mortgage you can afford.

In any event I wouldn't liquidate more than 25 per cent of that portfolio for this purpose.

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL:

I'm having a fight with my real estate broker which maybe you can straighten out. I put my house up for sale with the broker (90 days), but about a month later a new man was transferred into our company and was in the market for a house. I showed him mine and it was just exactly what he wanted.

I had my lawyer draw up the papers, arranged the financing through my own savings and loan association, and now the broker wants a commission for doing nothing! I am refusing to pay him and he is threatening to take me to court. Can he do this? — Mr. P. L. J. (Philadelphia, Pa.)

ANSWER: Sure, why not? A deal is a deal and you just went to a lot of personal trouble for nothing. Once the new man expressed an interest in your house you should have turned the whole deal over to your broker.

I'm a little baffled as to why your lawyer didn't point this out.

Wrong heat distributor location could cause chill

If your thermostat indicates that your house is warm enough but you still feel chilly and uncomfortable, maybe your heat distributors are located in the wrong places, says the Better Heating-Cooling Council.

Although comfort requirements may vary from person to person, there are certain criteria which are accepted as standard. For instance, people are most comfortable when there is a minimal difference in temperature between the floor and the ceiling.

Tests conducted at the University of Illinois demonstrate that hydronic baseboard heating panels, when installed under windows, are particularly effective in maintaining even temperatures between floors and ceilings.

Another important point to remember is to locate all thermostats away from direct contact with heat, cold and sunlight. This permits them to record only the temperature in the room and nothing else.

Homes equipped with hydronic baseboard heating panels never suffer from cold floors, even if they are built on slab foundations, the council reports.

That's because hydronic baseboard heating emits radiant heat which warms the floors.

Professor sees offices in houses

Commuting and rush hour traffic may be long-forgotten aggravations when offices of the future are located in people's homes, Robert C. Turner, professor of business economics and public policy at Indiana University, predicts.

Turner presents his outlook for "Housing in the 1990's" in the current issue of the MGIC Newsletter, published by Mortgage Guaranty Insurance Corp.

"Already, many large corporations are decentralizing their operations because communication technology has made it unnecessary to locate all employees in one place," Turner writes.

"It is only one step further to locate people's offices in their homes, so that no commuting at all is required. People will then live where they want to live, for non-occupational reasons, where land costs are lower."

Turner also predicts that demand for housing, measured in dollars of constant purchasing power, should increase by 32 to 40 per cent from 1975 to 1985.

"Demographic influences alone will mean a strong demand for housing for at least 10, and perhaps 15 years," he writes.

"What counts in determining demand is not total population, but the number of households," writes Turner. "In recent years, there has been a marked increase in the number of 'live-alones' and households with children headed by a single parent. There has also been a tendency for elderly people to continue to occupy a residential unit, rather than to move in with their children."

"Smaller households indicate smaller residential units — one or two instead of three or four bedroom houses. Therefore, although the number of housing units built will probably rise, the cost per unit will probably decline," he said.

"If the rising costs of construction relative to other costs can be stopped, consumers will be in a better income position to buy housing than they have been in the past," Turner predicts. "People are coming to realize that a house is about the best inflation hedge there is."

Superblock mall buoys merchants

The $12 million Superblock project in downtown Des Plaines is well into Phase II, the construction of a 185,000-square foot mall.

Des Plaines' merchants, some of whom have been in business since 1890, said the Des Plaines Mall will benefit the city and increase their businesses.

Owners of stores that are not moving into the mall feel that the mall will revitalize downtown Des Plaines and will bring customers back to Des Plaines to shop.

Robert Spiegler, co-owner of Spiegler's Department Store, a clothing and general merchandise retailer based in Des Plaines since 1890, explained why his store is moving into the Des Plaines Mall. "We at Spiegler's believe our success is based on our long-term ability to maintain steady customer traffic patterns."

A crucial decision faced Spiegler's owners when their customer traffic pattern started to decrease due to a decaying central business district. Spiegler's had to decide whether to move from the community or stay, and move into the proposed Des Plaines Mall which would be located directly behind the existing store.

Spiegler's decided its success had resulted from emphasis on the warm home town department store, an image they could maintain while located in the downtown business district.

Des Plaines' merchants believe that, with Spiegler's decision to occupy 23,000 square feet on three levels, and serve as its anchor store, the Des Plaines Mall will bring back "home town shopping" to Des Plaines.

Monthly payments major factor in buying house

When buying a home, the determining factor should be the monthly payments rather than the price.

That formula will help prevent future financial difficulties, said Rudy Muszar, manager of the Callero & Callero Realty office in Des Plaines.

"The common rule that you should buy a home priced no higher than 2 1/2 times your gross annual income doesn't necessarily apply any more," he said. "There are too many variables that can pop up later to create problems."

A more realistic measure is that the total payment debt does not exceed 30 per cent of the combined gross monthly income, Muszar said.

The 2 1/2 times method isn't always feasible because it doesn't consider the down payment, interest rate, insurance, real estate taxes and mortgage terms, he said.

He said it simply implies that if you earn $20,000 a year you should be in the market for a $50,000 home.

However, down payments and interest rates on a $50,000 home can mean the difference between thousands of dollars in the total cost of the property, Muszar said. He cites these examples:

With 5 per cent down on a 29-year, $47,500 mortgage, the monthly payments at 9 per cent interest amount to $340.83.

With 20 per cent down on a 29-year, $40,000 mortgage, the monthly payments at 7 per cent interest come to $260.86.

In addition, you should add around 2 per cent for real estate taxes (a $50,000 home in most Northwest suburban communities has a yearly tax bill of $1,000, or $83 per month), plus $10 a month for insurance.

As a result, two buyers who each earn $20,000 a year will make different monthly payments based on different down payments and mortgage terms.

The buyer who put down 5 per cent at 9 per cent interest will pay approximately $447.83 per month, including tax and insurance.

While the buyer who put down 20 per cent at 7 per cent interest will have total monthly payments of $361.86.

"That's a difference of $115.97 per month, or $1,391.64 a year," said Muszar. "Since most families are operating on a budget, that kind of money can buy a lot of groceries, furniture, vacations and cover other expenses."

Muszar also said that these monthly payments are similar to some rents, emphasizing the advantages of home ownership over apartment rental.

"The homeowner is gaining equity and tax breaks for the same amount of money as the apartment dweller pays, not to mention privacy and other conveniences," he said.

Do only critical work

Pre-moving house fixup costly

The following question is one that is frequently asked by homeowners. It has to do with what repairs to make when selling a house.

DEAR MR. MELTZER: Last year my next door neighbor sold his house. Prior to selling, he worked almost every night and every weekend for three months repainting the entire exterior and interior. When he finally finished, he put the house on the market and was able to sell it in three weeks.

I am now planning on selling my house. Is it necessary to do a complete repainting job first? How will this affect the value? —UNPAINTED.

I hope I am not the only one old enough to remember when the first thing you would do to a new car was install slipcovers. The car owner would then drive the car for three or four years with the slipcovers on, and would not remove them until it was time to trade in the car.

The end result was that the second owner would reap the benefit of a new-looking interior. The first owner spent the last three years on inexpensive slipcovers.

Too many people follow this same practice with their houses. They live for years in properties that need decoration or renovation work. They only perform the work when it is time to move. Therefore, the original owner never gets the benefit of any of the repairs.

Experience has taught me that the only type of repairs that should be made before a sale are critical ones, such as broken plaster, peeling wallpaper, deteriorated flooring, etc. As far as the typical decoration is concerned, the new homeowner expects to do this himself. If he pays additional money, it will only be for the equivalent cost of the paint job.

Before selling, clean up your house, eliminate excess water, repair major items, but don't go to the expense of repainting the entire property.

DEAR MR. MELTZER: I am an automobile mechanic and own my garage. About 15 years ago I bought a nice building with a good-sized parking lot in the rear. Last year the highway department decided they were going to widen the road that runs in the rear of my property.

As a result, they condemned 80 per cent of my parking lot. They paid me a fair price for the land that was taken. However, I am unable to stay in business at this location without my parking lot. Do you think this is fair?—CONDEMNED

Not only is it unfair, but you are entitled to additional payment by the highway department. You should have been compensated for two types of damages — damages for land taken and damages to the real estate remaining.

As a garage building, your property is not as valuable without the parking lot as it was when you owned it. I would suggest that you hire a good real estate appraiser and a lawyer who knows something about condemnation situations.

DEAR MR. MELTZER: Every time I turn on my water spigot, I get rusty water for the first 10 seconds. The water clears after that. Is there some sort of cleaner I can use to prevent this?—MUDDY WATERS.

It sounds to me like a case of iron plumbing. At one time, iron was standard type of plumbing pipe. This has been changed to copper and plastic in the areas where plastic is legal.

The problem with iron is that it rusts easily. Copper and plastic do not do this. When purchasing an old house, it is important to be very careful in seeing that the plumbing system has been converted. Sometimes this is difficult to determine because the pipes in the basement are all copper. This does not mean that the risers in the walls have been changed.

In your case, you either have to live with it or spend the money to convert your iron plumbing. If you do decide to live with it, you can be assured

United publishes new moving data

United Van Lines has announced the availability of new editions of its popular consumer information publications, "The Pre-Planned Moving Guide," "Thinking about doing your own packing...?" and "How to sell your house faster...and for more!"

Carol Sellev, United's marketing communications manager, said the new publications are "working tools which everyone should have handy when preparing for a relocation."

"The Pre-Planned Moving Guide's" major feature is a timetable checklist of specific considerations before, during, and after the move," Mrs. Sellev said. "Our 20-page, illustrated book also contains a two-page personal household inventory, carton labels, change-of-address cards, and an important papers pocket to aid in keeping in one place all papers concerning the move."

In United's pamphlet "Thinking about doing your own packing...?", there's a wealth of information and tips on the best packing methods and materials to use for preparing fragile items, books, appliances, tools — everything that is included in a household move.

Selling a house is undoubtedly one of the major financial transactions facing an individual or family. United's "How to sell your house faster...and for more!" pamphlet presents straightforward hints and information about pricing, property appearance, advertising, and handling the details of a sale yourself. There's a special section devoted to selecting and working with realtors.

"Your local United agent will be glad to make these publications available without charge to anyone," Mrs. Sellev said. "To request them, or information about moving appliances, plants, buying a house, and tax-deductible moving expenses, just call him. He's listed in the Yellow Pages under 'Movers'."

Different home fire detectors on market

More and more homeowners are becoming aware of the protection provided by "fire detectors" for the home, but few home owners are really aware of the differences in the types of detectors available.

With the increase in consumer demand, more of these devices are now readily available at retail outlets, but they all do not provide the same life-saving protection, the Insurance Information Institute says.

There are at least four types of fire/smoke detectors currently being marketed commercially: ionization, photo-electric, flame and thermal.

The ionization detector offers the earliest warning and perhaps the best protection. Basically, the device senses gases in the air, therefore providing a fire warning on the gases given off from a fire often long before smoke builds up and certainly way before the flames become intense enough to set off a thermal detector.

The photo-electric detector, often called a smoke detector, is activated by smoke — even minute quantities that may be invisible to the naked eye — breaking a beam of light. This type of detector is considered by fire departments and by several studies to be equal in quality to the ionization type.

Less desirable detectors are the flame/heat and thermal types. The area in which these detectors are located must be fairly well involved in flames before they will sound a warning. These devices are recommended for use as a secondary part of a protection system and should be installed in garages, furnace rooms and kitchens.

For primary protection, and as a basic beginning to a home fire protection system, the Institute recommends that all homes have at least one ionization or photo-electric device located on the ceiling immediately outside of bedrooms. If the home owner desires greater protection, then the basic system can be augmented by flame/heat and/or thermal operated devices located in the kitchen, garage and furnace rooms.

The next step up in improved home fire protection, according to fire departments, would be for the home owner to have all of the various detecting devices wired together so that if one is set off all of the devices in the system will sound a warning.

The sensitivity of the ionization and photo-electric devices makes them undesirable for use in kitchen, garage or furnace room. But it is exactly this sensitivity that makes them most desirable for use near bedrooms where the earliest possible warning of a fire is necessary.

Each of the four basic types of detectors is available from several different manufacturers and usually with one of three choices of power supply: battery, alternating current and a combination system.

Most battery-operated detectors meet National Fire Protection Association (NFPA) requirements by incorporating a minimum seven-day warning system that will indicate low battery voltage. These detectors will warn the home owner when the batteries are ready for replacement; however, it is possible to miss this warning and become unprotected when the batteries finally fail.

An additional disadvantage of this type of power source is that some of the types of batteries used are difficult to find and others may be expensive to replace. Battery-operated detectors, generally, are more expensive for the retail customer, but as long as the batteries are maintained in good order these detectors provide excellent fire protection.

Alternating current or plug-in types of power sources for home fire detectors are probably the type most generally available and least expensive for the public to purchase. These devices will be ineffective during power outages, however, and, in areas susceptible to severe storms and frequent power failures, they may be less than desirable.

A popular misconception about plug-in type fire detectors is that they are likely to be rendered useless in the event of an electrical system fire. Extensive testing by the NFPA and others indicates that it is unlikely that all circuits in a home electrical fire will be destroyed before a fire detector with this type of power supply sounds the warning, particularly if more than one detector is in use.

There is at least one manufacturer now marketing a detector that uses both batteries and alternating current for a power source. This type is perhaps the most expensive, but it does seem to blend the best attributes of both detector power source systems.

Some insurance companies now provide discounts on homeowner's insurance policies for the installation and maintenance of home fire detectors, and many companies are considering discounts.

The Institute cautions that the home owner should purchase only detectors that have been approved, or listed, by Underwriters' Laboratories and/or Factory Mutual. The devices frequently can be installed by the home owner, but the manufacturer's instructions should be closely followed.

Finally, building code requirements on the installation of fire detectors vary greatly from area to area. It would be best to check with your building department about code restrictions of these devices prior to purchase.

Town square fixups increase

Nice things do come in small packages, especially when one comes across the restoration of yesteryear's town square.

This development concept is now emerging in rural as well as some suburban areas, said Jackson W. Goss, president and chief executive officer of Investors Mortgage Insurance Company, Boston, a subsidiary of Investors Mortgage Group, Inc. IMIC.

"Tucked away in quiet, rural communities off the beaten path and far from city bustle there is emerging a restoration pattern — all reflecting the nostalgic charm of another day," Goss said. "It is a rewarding experience for those seeking this type of life style."

These whimsical restorations are beginning to appear in mountainous regions where small villages have almost become ghost towns — deserted and abandoned.

"Enterprising developers, interested in preserving these quaint hamlets, are indeed bringing them back to life — the old way of life."

"Old mills — with accompanying waterwheels — are being converted into handsome residences. Even the wormy chestnut walls find themselves the background for old prints and paintings," Goss said.

Stables, blacksmith shops, former sawmill sheds and even silos are making a new entrance on the pastoral scene. All are carefully and painstakingly restored to their original forms.

"Besides being converted to residences, many of the old town square buildings also serve as shops where artisans can display their wares," he said.

In some cases, a shop and residence will become a "package deal. The shopkeeper resides above his shop — a community within a community."

A stone's throw from these tiny squares, condominium housing is also appearing — all in authentic period architecture. Mini-townhouses, colonial detached single family cottages, and low-flung stone garden apartments are built to fit in with the surroundings.

"For anyone who wishes to enjoy remembrances of the past amidst present day conveniences, it would pay them to find their very own town square of yesteryear," Goss said.

Bug damage you should know, and how to fight it

It's your landscape

by George Creed

It would take an encyclopedia to describe the tell-tale marks that are characteristic of all the many varieties of insects that attack plants in your landscape. But the four here are fairly common and easy to identify.

Sketch A shows scale on a twig of magnolia. These are sucking insects that are protected by a soft brown shell. If present, they are usually conspicuous on twigs and branches of magnolia, but there is another sign of their presence if you can't immediately spot them — sooty-colored leaves caused by a fungus that apparently flourishes on the sweetish excreta of the scale insects.

If a magnolia is infested with a great many of these scale insects, it becomes debilitated and sickly-looking. To control, spray with an oil spray when the tree is dormant. Or spray with Sevin or malathion in August or September when the scale insects can be seen crawling. Spraying at other times is not effective.

If you have columbines in your garden, you have probably noticed that in many of the leaves there are brownish-green winding tunnels that disfigure them. These are caused by leaf miners, chewing insects that tunnel between the upper and lower leaf surfaces. To control them, spray with lindane as soon as you notice small gray kidney-shaped areas in the leaves about the middle of May. Spray again in the latter part of June. Sketch B shows damage done by leaf miners.

The black vine weevil, a brownish-black insect with a short snout, gnaws the edges of yews, rhododendrons, azaleas and other plants. The jagged edges of the yew shown in Sketch C illustrate the kind of damage this weevil does.

But the black vine weevil does not confine its efforts to the leaves alone; in the grub stage it also eats roots. If you have an evergreen that turns brown suddenly and dies, it is possible that the grubs of this weevil have eaten off all or most of its roots. To control, spray and drench the soil with lindane or heptachlor from the 15th to the end of June.

The leafcutter bee is properly named. It is this bee that cuts out ovals and circles from the leaves of your roses. It uses the oval-shaped leaf tissue to line the sides of its nest and circular forms as partitions between egg cells. Its nests are made in burrows in hollow stems of plants or in old wood. While the bee's work does not improve the appearance of rose leaves, it does little actual damage; in fact the bee does more good than harm, for it is a pollinator of plants.

Q. Can I use sawdust as a mulch to good advantage?

A. Yes. If it is fresh sawdust, spread nitrate of soda around plants before placing the sawdust. Keep the soda from contact with plants.

LET'S TALK IT OVER

JERRY BOUSCHARD

An oral contract can be as valid and as binding as a written one. Any attorney can tell you it is just as easy to provide all the necessary elements verbally as in written form.

The problems arise later, when the parties disagree over exactly what was said or meant. Sworn testimony from witnesses becomes important. A written contractual agreement can be re-examined whenever necessary to verify all terms and conditions, but the validity of an oral contract depends on the memories of the parties involved.

When we handle a real estate transaction for you, we see that all agreements are in correct, written form, for your protection. When you first start thinking about any real estate matter... that's the time to come in and "Talk It Over" with us.

Mortgage banking makes big, uneven recovery

The mortgage banking industry, spurred by record single-family home mortgage sales in 1975, is making a dramatic but uneven comeback from the 1973-74 recession that plagued the nation's economy and the housing market.

Mortgage company closings of single-family VA loans broke the 1974 record by 17 per cent, according to the Mortgage Bankers Assn. of America. Single-family FHA closings were up 28 per cent, reversing the long downward trend that began in mid-1971. However, conventional home lending dropped 10 per cent.

Although the average firm reporting in the annual survey of financial statements just released showed a loss for the second consecutive year, this loss was $85,000, off sharply from the average $304,000 loss reported in 1974. Only 67 of the 258 reporting firms showed net operating losses, compared to 96 the previous year. Virtually all the reported losses came from companies with large (over $400 million) mortgage servicing portfolios.

Average income from net interest on mortgage operations was boosted by the return of a favorable spread between long- and short-term rates. The prime interest rate at commercial banks, which peaked at 12 per cent in 1974, plunged from 10½ per cent at the beginning of 1975 to 7½ per cent at the end of the year. Short-term rates were consistently lower than the prime throughout the year.

Although mortgage rates began zig-zagging after the first quarter, mortgage company gains were protected by an influx of favorably priced investor commitments. Savings flows at thrift institutions grew at a record pace, revitalizing their secondary market mortgage activities. Attractive GNMA security yields also drew many investors from outside the traditional mortgage markets.

However, the surge in single-family activity was partially offset by mixed performances in other areas. Conventional multifamily lending was hit hardest. Loans closed and new commitments from investors on apartments fell to less than half their 1974 levels. The face amount of construction loans closed was down 25 per cent, a hangover of the 1973-74 inflation-recession spiral. Nonresidential activity was the least affected, with investor commitments down only 10 per cent and loan closings unchanged from 1974 levels.

The report noted that rising costs for loan originations and servicing exerted a considerable drag on company profits. With no end in sight to the steady stream of laws, rules and regulations swamping the industry, these escalating administrative costs will become a significant factor impinging on the future health of the industry.

Despite these problems, the report stated that single-family lending will continue to rise through 1976 and 1977, followed by improvements in construction, nonresidential and even multifamily lending activity. The association predicted that "the 1976 report should present an even better financial picture for mortgage companies, especially since the economy is giving every indication of being able to sustain growth without rapidly rising inflation."

Furnishing home exciting, costly

You have just purchased your first home. Now furnish it says Jackson W. Goss, president and chief executive officer of Investors Mortgage Insurance Co., Boston, a subsidiary of Investors Mortgage Group, Inc.

"Setting up housekeeping can be a very exciting project — albeit, an arduous and expensive one," Goss said. To make the project easier, Goss said to stand back — count to 10 — and take a good look at the overall situation. Then make lists to clearly show what you have — what you need. The first list should be made up of furnishings you already have — to avoid any duplication while shopping. Newlyweds should add what wedding gifts they anticipate. When asked by friends or relatives what they want — refer to these lists.

One good money-saver is furnishing the home with secondhand items. These can be re-cycled as you go along. For instance, a chest of drawers originally bought for a bedroom can be repainted later for use in the pantry or kitchen.

Don't expect to achieve the comfort and attractiveness of the homes of friends who have taken years to accumulate their belongings, Goss said. Starting out simply — with absolutely minimum furnishings — will get you on the road to a lovely home quicker than trying to do it all at once.

Goss warned against letting friends and family make choices for you — it's your dwelling and you know what you want in it.

Improve if the budget is drained, Goss said. Some of those make-do ideas never seem to go out of style. Just framing a travel poster can add a decorative note — and at minimal expense.

If a room is short on furniture, fill in with plants. Young people, particularly, literally mass their rooms with greens to achieve the effect they want.

Finally, don't fret if you make a decorating or purchase mistake. A first home is for fun — for experimentation. If an inspiration backfires, you are free to change it.

Mortgage foreclosures decline

Mortgage payment delinquencies turned up sharply during the second quarter, but the foreclosure rate dropped to a record low during the quarter.

The National Delinquency Survey, a quarterly report by the Mortgage Bankers Assn. of America (MBA), showed that the foreclosure rate on home mortgages was only 0.15 per cent in the second quarter of 1976, down from 0.18 per cent in the first quarter. In sharp contrast the 90-day delinquency rate (which includes mortgages three or more months in arrears) hit a record high of 0.57 per cent.

Although MBA had predicted a rise in FHA delinquencies due to the new HUD servicing requirements, the comparable rise in VA and conventional delinquencies was unexpected. The FHA-insured 90-day delinquency rate jumped from 0.49 per cent of loans outstanding on March 31 to 0.59 per cent on June 30.

The 90-day VA loan delinquency rate rose from 0.46 per cent to 0.53 per cent. Delinquencies on conventional loans rose to 0.39 per cent of loans outstanding from 0.33 per cent three months earlier.

"It is unclear why non-FHA loans also took such a sharp upturn in delinquencies," said John Wetmore, MBA's chief economist.

Responses to the survey cited spillover effects of the new HUD requirements on FHA loans as one factor. The industry's loan servicing operations have been so overburdened by the new HUD procedures that they have been forced to cut back collection efforts, Wetmore said.

He noted the slowdown in growth of real GNP during the second quarter, continued inflation, and increases in unemployment, taxes and utility rates as contributing causes to the delinquency rise.

"We've also had a significant change in the mix of loans on the books," he said. "The recent record home sales pace has produced an exceptionally large payoff of older, low interest rate mortgages, which are replaced by loans with high loan-to-value ratios. These unsensitized loans traditionally have higher delinquency rates. Furthermore, a larger proportion of homebuyers are in younger age brackets, which means they don't have large savings as a cushion against unexpected strains on their budgets," Wetmore said.

"The decline in foreclosures may be misleading," Wetmore said. "All of the decline from the first quarter was due to a drop in FHA loans going into foreclosure. The new HUD procedures may have distorted the numbers since the backlog of FHA mortgages awaiting HUD approval for foreclosure action has mushroomed. That puts mortgage bankers right in the middle since this HUD processing delay merely postpones FHA foreclosures."

The MBA National Delinquency Survey analyzes over 7 million mortgage loans on one-to-four-family residences totalling an estimated $97 billion of debt. They represent about one out of every four outstanding single-family mortgage loans in the nation, and over two-thirds of all VA and FHA loans in force.

House buy for young, expert says

Young people — singles or couples — often regard the purchase of a home as something beyond their financial means. Virgil E. Grand, president of the Northwest Suburban Board of Realtors said they're the ones who should seriously consider buying a home.

Most young people have a rising scale of earning power ahead of them. What may be a tight budget to them now will become easier as time passes, Grand said. And payments on a home are seldom higher to them than apartment rentals if they choose wisely and stay within their current and projected income level.

The usual comparison of rent receipts against growing equity is a valid one, Grand said. Also, modest monthly mortgage payments — even at high interest rates — will accumulate substantial equity growth over five to 10 years. There are advantages in income tax deductions for taxes and interest paid — and in the satisfaction of ownership.

A survey conducted recently by the Federal Housing Administration (FHA) cites $247 as the average monthly cost of owning a home. The breakdown, according to the FHA, is this:

Mortgage payment	$181
Heat, utilities, repairs & maint.	52
Real estate taxes	34
Total	$247

Home ownership isn't right for all young people. A job that requires frequent relocation could mean that home purchase isn't the wisest course. The mobility afforded by renting is so attractive to some people that they're willing to forego advantages of accumulated capital. Rental payments can sometimes buy more spacious quarters than the same dollars in mortgage payments.

An alternative to buying a single-family home is purchasing low-cost income property, such as a duplex. The down payment requirement usually is comparable to that needed for a single-family home. Half of the property supplies income from rental which helps retire the loan. Maintenance costs generally are higher and ownership of income-producing property carries with it additional responsibilities.

If young people purchase income property now, in a few years, they may be able to use both sides of the duplex for income and purchase a single-family house, Grand said.

It's wise for them to consider all the alternatives and to examine their particular circumstances before entering into any kind of property ownership agreement, he said.

The good — and bad — of covering Bears' game

When you earn a living writing about sports, you have to expect comments like this every so often:

Neighbor: How about playing golf Sunday.

Writer: I have to work.

Neighbor: Doing what?

Writer: Covering the Bears' home opener with the Lions.

Neighbor: That's hardly work. Imagine, getting paid to watch a game for free, having a great seat, eating and drinking all you want and meeting all the big-name pros. You've got it made!

Writer: Oh, it isn't all that rosy a situation.

Neighbor: Yeah, yeah. I know. Sure. See ya.

Nobody ever wants to hang around to hear the other side of the story. They just visualize all the good aspects, never thinking about the bad. If they would just consider the minuses along with the pluses:

(+) Enjoying the beautiful day despite the drive into Chicago.

(-) Fighting the traffic on the Kennedy.

(+) Arriving at the parking lot without a mishap.

(-) Seeing Soldier Field — Chicago's "white elephant."

(+) Overhearing the comment, "When Chicago had the great fire, the water tower and this place somehow survived."

(-) Seeing someone in awe of Irv Kupcinet, the rah-rah announcer for Bears' radio games.

Paul Logan

Associate Sports Editor

(+) Knowing that I wouldn't have to listen to his color commentary like so many fans had to because of the TV blackout.

(-) Eating a lukewarm frankfurter and a warm Coke, compliments of the Bears.

(-) Wondering if classier meals were being offered at places like New York or Los Angeles?

(-) Wading through piles of pro statistics. Critical information that the average fan isn't privy to — the Bears have scored 1009 points in all previous season openers while giving up just 899, or the 43 Bears' total shower weight is 9,652 pounds minus towels.

(+) Remembering that by being at the game also meant not having to listen to Jack Brickhouse's cheerleading on radio.

(-) Forgetting my No-Doz pills. Can you imagine the embarrassment of having to tell your boss you couldn't report the full story because the first half put you to sleep?

(+) Having the Bear boo-birds to keep me awake.

(-) Choking on a ham and cheese sandwich at halftime.

(-) Wondering if hot meals were being served by classy pro football organizations like New York and Los Angeles?

(-) Wondering if Soldier Field is the only stadium in the National Football League that doesn't sell beer?

(-) Having my thoughts of food and drink disrupted by the start of the second half.

(+) Enjoying the second-half play, especially several exciting moments.

(-) Being frustrated because the instant replays on TV weren't visible from my seat location.

(-) Making the mistake of waiting for the final statistics before going to the lockerrooms.

(-) Discovering the Lions' den deserted. Losers tend to shower very quickly.

(+) Finding plenty of Bears to interview.

(-) Being frustrated because naked Bears all look alike.

(-) Finding a few famous faces to talk to, but none could give any good reasons for the lack of a more potent offense.

(+) Walking out of Soldier Field.

(+) Finding my car still in the parking lot.

(-) Failing to discover any noticeable new deats.

(-) Fighting the traffic on the Kennedy.

(-) Managing to pound out a story before deadline.

(+) Hoping to end the long day by running into my wise-guy neighbor.

(-) Failing to see him, unfortunately.

Weighing all the pluses and minuses, covering the Bears isn't too bad, especially because I don't have to do it every Sunday. That's the biggest plus of all.

North runners open conference schedule

by ART MUGALIAN

Cross Country Editor

Slowed by injuries and illness, the Palatine cross country team will dive into Mid-Suburban North dual meet competition tonight at Wheeling, and head coach Joe Johnson admits his team is not yet at peak form.

"(Jon) Dahlgren is injured and he probably won't run," said Johnson.

"The others will not be at full strength, but they'll probably run."

The others Johnson referred to are senior captain Tony Vargas and juniors Chuck Elliott and Tom Johnson. All three have missed a lot of workouts because of illness. Elliott and Johnson, who clocked sub-9:35 two-miles last spring, have yet to run in competition this season.

"When we're completely healthy I think we'll be one of the top five teams or so in the state," Johnson said.

Without their top four, Johnson's Pirates will meet an unproved Wheeling team led by junior Ben Sanchez, Kevin Lucas and Dennis Kelly.

"Right now our No. 1 man is Kevin Nikolai," said the Palatine coach.

Nikolai led the depleted Palatine squad past Crystal Lake, 22-46, on Monday as Elliott, Johnson, Vargas and Dahlgren sat it out.

In other North Division openers today, defending champ Fremd visits Buffalo Grove and Arlington hosts Hersey. In the South, Conant (2-0) entertains Rolling Meadows (1-1), Schaumburg (0-2) hosts Hoffman Estates (1-0), and Prospect (1-1) visits Elk Grove (0-1).

Forest View (1-1) hosts St. Viator in a non-conference clash.

Fremd, too, has been plagued by injuries and coach Ron Menely hopes to have his Vikings at full strength when they run a young Buffalo Grove squad today.

John Filosa, the defending NSL individual champion, and teammates Dan Inbody and Dan Tischler have been slowed recently by minor injuries.

Filosa's younger brother, sophomore Matt, was the Vikings' first finisher at the Crystal Lake Invitational Saturday. Matt ran seventh.

A young and aggressive Arlington team, which ran second ahead of Fremd at Crystal Lake, will meet an even younger Hersey team today. Arlington, led by juniors Jim Lear and Tom Tremblay, is already the talk of the league.

Hersey's promising sophs, Rich Rieger and Steve Johnson, are the core of coach Larry Travis' varsity.

In the South, Conant and Hoffman Estates will try to maintain their undefeated marks with their Oct. 7 showdown looming ahead on the schedule.

A classic confrontation could take place in the Forest View-St. Viator race where Falcon Darryl Robinson and St. Viator's Dave Elken match their impressive early-season records.

Pittsburgh back in hunt, powers past Phillies, 7-2

PHILADELPHIA — Bill Robinson and Richie Zisk each connected for their 20th home runs and Dave Parker added his 11th Wednesday night to power the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 7-2 victory over Philadelphia which cut the Phillies' National League Eastern Division lead to five games.

John Candelaria scattered three hits over the first seven innings to pick up his 15th victory against six losses. Kent Tekulve finished up.

Jim Kaat, the first of five Philadelphia pitchers, served up Robinson's and Zisk's homers and suffered his 13th loss against 11 victories.

Robinson connected following a single by Parker to put the Pirates in front 2-0 in the third inning. Zisk hit a solo homer to make it 3-0 with two out in the third and a double by Willie Stargell plus Parker's single made it 4-0 and knocked out Kaat. Parker added his solo homer in the ninth.

Dick Allen hit his 14th homer following a walk to Mike Schmidt in the fourth, but the Pirates scored twice more on Tug McGraw in the eighth.

Parker doubled and tallied on a single by Robinson, who scored the sixth run on a pinch-hit double by Tommy Helms.

SURVEYING THE scene is Philadelphia Phillies' manager Danny Ozark. The Phillies had a 15-game lead at one time in August in the National League East.

THE LONE RUNNER. Prospect's Mark Smith is by himself and in the lead in dual meet against Hoffman Estates. Smith, a talented junior, was the winner in 14:05 on the Knights' home course, but Hoffman Estates won the meet, 20-37.

Team Canada wins crown in overtime

MONTREAL — Darryl Sittler faked out Czech goaltender Vladimír Dzurilla, then fired into the vacant net at 11:33 of the first overtime session to give Canada a 5-4 victory over Czechoslovakia Wednesday night and earn for the host nation the championship of its own Canada Cup of Hockey tournament.

The victory, before a standing room only crowd of 18,040 at the Montreal Forum, enabled Canada to sweep the Czechs in two straight games in the best-of-three final series. Sittler took a pass from Lanny McDonald at the Czech blueline and faked out Dzurilla.

Earlier in the overtime session, Guy Lapointe had an apparent Cup-winning goal disallowed. He shot with one second left in the first half of the first overtime, but his shot trickled past Dzurilla after time had expired in the session.

Guy Lafleur also had a goal disallowed 8:30 into the overtime when the Czechs deliberately knocked the goal cage off its post and received a bench penalty for it.

Canada, which finished first at 4-1 in the round robin portion of this six-nation tournament to earn $100,000, received an additional $30,000 for the finals victory, meaning each player on the 25-man squad got $6,000.

The Chicago Black Hawks' Bobby Orr was selected the Most Valuable Player of the tournament.

Bears place Nordquist on waivers

The Bears put offensive guard Mark Nordquist on waivers Wednesday and assigned defensive end Gary Hrivnak to the injured reserve list.

To fill out the roster, the Bears signed rookie free agent Gary Fencik, a safety from Yale who was the Miami Dolphins' 10th draft choice, and reactivated defensive end Jerry Meyers.

Hrivnak will be out for the season.

Oakland stars consider contracts

KINGSTON, R.I. — Five Oakland A's players will tell owner Charlie Finley within three days whether they will accept his latest contract offer, according to their attorney.

"We're going to try to talk with him again within three days," said Jerry Kapstein, attorney for relief pitcher Rolfe Fingers, outfielders Joe Rudi and Don Baylor, first baseman Gene Tenace and shortstop Bert Campaneris. The five will become free agents at the end of the season if they do not sign.

"They'd like to stay in the Oakland area," Kapstein said Wednesday after a two-hour meeting with the controversial Finley. "They like it there. They like to play together. They'll take a little less to stay in Oakland, but not a lot less," Kapstein said. He declined to reveal how much Finley offered the players.

The offer was the first from Finley since he sold Fingers and Rudi to the Boston Red Sox for $1 million each last June. The sale was voided by Commissioner Bowie Kuhn and Finley is contesting the ruling in federal courts.

Kapstein said Finley "has done more than anyone else to establish the value of players. All I have on the table are some new proposals from Charlie," he said. "We're going to consider them. We're going to give him an answer and even if we reject we still hope we can continue talking."

Kapstein said he hoped to meet with Finley again during his stay at a resort hotel in this seaside community. However, a clerk at the hotel said Finley checked out immediately after the talks.

Expansion teams join NBA talks

NEW YORK — The newly-expanded Board of Governors of the National Basketball Association will meet today in Chicago it was announced Wednesday by NBA Commissioner Lawrence O'Brien.

"The inclusion of four new governors at the meeting was made possible late Tuesday when U. S. District Court Judge Robert Carter dissolved the injunction that would have prohibited the expansion of the NBA," O'Brien said. "Judge Carter also entered an order approving the settlement of the class-action suit by the American Basketball Association Players' Association."

"The court action and the payment today of $6-million, representing $2-million each by the former ABA teams — Denver, Indiana, San Antonio and the New York Nets — clears the way for these teams to formally join the NBA and take part in our meeting tomorrow."

O'Brien said the four teams are required to pay an additional $200,000 each next June, completing the payment schedule for the $3.2-million total per team.

College cage tourney back on tube

NEW YORK — The National Invitation Tournament regained national video exposure Wednesday when it announced an agreement with the Mizlou Television Network for coverage of its 40th annual post season basketball tournament championship game on Sunday, March 20, 1977. CBS held the previous contract for NIT telecasting.

College players who have starred in past NIT's include Frankie Baumholtz, George Mikan, Easy Ed Macauley, Tom Gola, Len Wilkens, the late Maurice Stokes, and Walt Frazier. Kentucky won the NIT title for the second time last year. The Wildcats took their first NIT championship 30 years ago in 1946.

Bando sues because of no coverup

RENO, Nev. — Oakland A's third baseman Sal Bando and his wife have filed a $2 million lawsuit charging the publishers of "Swank" magazine with defamation of character and invasion of privacy. In the suit, attorneys for Bando and his wife Sandra accuse the magazine of intentionally and wrongfully publishing a lewd photograph depicting him. The suit says the photograph, when accompanied by Glenn Dickey's article "Jock Sex," combine to wrongfully accuse Bando of "promiscuity, immorality and infidelity."

Bando's name was not mentioned in the article itself and Dickey, author of "The Jock Empire" and a San Francisco Chronicle columnist, was not named in the action. Bando said the article is "untrue, libelous and defamatory," and exposed him to contempt and ridicule.

'Nice doggie'

The morning jogger has some visitors

While out for an early-morning jog the other day, I was joined by two members of the canine family who, it turned out, weren't interested in chasing fire engines or digging up bones.

They, too, were getting in a few miles and nothing was going to stop them — or almost nothing.

I was chugging along on my third mile when I spotted them about 50 yards ahead, near a road-construction site. They were two of the biggest retrievers in the world: one, a black Labrador and the other a Golden Retriever. Neither of them appeared to have eaten in several days so I elected to detour around them.

No runner likes dogs, especially a slow runner, and especially unleashed, unmuzzled, unsocialized dogs. "Nice doggie," I have often pleaded. "Go pick on a cat with fur." Then I end up on the ground, flagging down passers-by and trying to separate nice doggie's teeth from my leg.

I wanted to run around these monstrous puppies, but an advancing bulldozer blocked my route on one side and a creek cut off my retreat on the other. So I decided to forge ahead and practice my charm.

"Lovely day today," I offered to deaf ears. The roaring bulldozer made conversation impossible.

Apparently, these dogs didn't care for talk anyway because they set out at full speed for a rendezvous with a point just below my left knee.

To my surprise, however, they didn't attack. Instead they pulled up and began running alongside me, one on either flank, as I looked down incredulously.

I crossed the highway, turned a couple of corners, and cut through a backyard. My panting pooches were keeping pace. Occasionally, one or the other would stop to sniff a fire hydrant, and the black one often ran ahead to reconnoiter. But they continued to run.

In my paranoid and oxygen-starved brain, I was beginning to think that these were two highly sophisticated dogs I was dealing with. Their plan was to run me into the ground — and THEN bite me.

Staff Sportswriter

By now I was into my fifth mile and tiring, having picked up the pace in a futile attempt to shake the hairy harriers. On the contrary, they were still right with me, although the Golden Retriever's tongue was dragging.

We headed down a narrow, two-lane road where every car had to slow down or come to a complete stop because of the strange man jogging with two large dogs. "They're with me," I called out in explanation.

But they weren't and I didn't want them to be. I couldn't go home because I didn't want the dogs to know where I lived. The whole episode was becoming a little too Kafka-esque for my liking.

Something had to be done.

Repeating my first circuit, I ran past the construction site, hoping someone would claim the errant pups.

One worker, who denied ownership, suggested I keep them. "I may have no choice," I gasped.

Soon, the Golden Retriever began to drop back, obviously hyper-ventilating. The black one, though, was in good shape and leading the pack, as it were. Occasionally he would cut me off by swerving his big, sweating body in front of my legs. Smart dog.

Eventually, I stopped at a 24-hour grocery with its front door blocked open. The dogs, puzzled but relieved at the respite, wandered aimlessly. I started to sneak around the building, planning my getaway. As I glanced back a last time, the proprietor of the store was shoving two huge Retrievers out of his establishment.

On the other side of the building, freedom was beckoning. I was sprinting now, away from the grocery, not wanting to look over my shoulder but unable to resist. No dogs. Free.

There, ahead of me, to my wonderment, was the black dog. How he managed to get that far in front I'll never understand. But there he was in the middle of the street. Grinning.

He had company too. It was the biggest, ugliest Doberman I ever laid eyes on. My black canine friend didn't seem to think the Doberman was so ugly. They scampered off into the bushes.

I ran off in the opposite direction, tired as a dog.

Burris zips Expos, 2-0

From Herald Wire Services

MONTREAL — Ray Burris pitched a five-hit shutout and the Chicago Cubs scored a pair of unearned runs in the third inning Wednesday to defeat the Montreal Expos, 2-0.

Burris, now 13-13, struck out four and did not give up a walk.

Mick Kelleher led off the third with a single against loser Steve Rogers and Burris sacrificed him to second. After Rick Monday struck out, Joe Wallis grounded down the first baseline.

Montreal first baseman Earl Williams then threw wildly to Rogers covering first and the ball ended up in the Cubs dugout, allowing Kelleher to score and Wallis to go to second. Bill Madlock's double scored Wallis.

Madlock drilled two hits in three official trips to the plate to up his National League-leading average to .345.

The defending batting champion has opened a full 10-point gap between his closest competitor Gary Maddox of Philadelphia who went into last night's action with a .335 mark.

The Cubs close out the current road trip with an afternoon game today in Montreal. They'll come home to the role of spoiler when East Division leader Philadelphia and challenging Pittsburgh invade for six games.

Rangers jar White Sox

Toby Harrah's 13th home run on Burt Johnson's first pitch in the sixth inning Wednesday night sparked the Texas Rangers to a 4-3 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

The Rangers added two runs in the eighth after Harrah's blow gave them a 2-1 edge.

Harrah, Mike Hargrove and Jeff Burroughs singled in order to open the eighth with Harrah scoring on Burroughs' hit, and after Roy Howell was walked intentionally, Hargrove scored on Len Randle's infield out.

Johnson, the Chicago starter, took his seventh straight loss and 15th overall against nine wins, while Rangers' starter Bert Blyleven got his 12th victory versus 15 defeats.

'King and His Court' fall to Johnny-O's in softball

Some sports history was made last week.

Eddie "The King" Feigner, the winningest pitcher of all time, lost a game at Thillens Stadium in Chicago.

Known as "The King and His Court," Feigner and his three teammates are famous for taking on all comers in a game of fast-pitch softball. Using just a catcher, first baseman, shortstop and himself, this foursome has defeated nearly 5,000 teams while losing less than 800 games during the past 30 years.

But Friday night they met their match in the Johnny-O's team. Playing under the sponsorship of this Palatine lounge, this local nine knocked off the court foursome, 4-1. In over 25 years of stopping his road show each year for three games at Thillens, Feigner's mini team had never lost.

Johnny-O's — a team made up mainly of players from the Arlington Heights-Mount Prospect area — played Feigner's team even for the first six innings. Jerry Larson pitched his way out of several jams and received some fine assistance from his defense.

In the bottom of the sixth, Johnny-O's loaded the bases with Mount Prospect's Terry Van Winkle, Arlington's Dave Kern and Skolde's Bob Volti. Jim Ruppert, who tripled the first time up only to be left stranded at third, stepped to the plate.

Feigner, who has struck out over 96,000 batters (over 19,000 blindfolded), tried to fan Ruppert as he had done earlier in the game. Instead, Ruppert ripped a triple to left-center field, clearing the bases. He, too, scored on an overthrow by the shortstop.

Larson gave up one run in the top of the seventh and fired the court's top home run hitter to pop up with two men on. He allowed just four hits to match Feigner in that category.

A crowd estimated between 1,000 and 1,500 saw the rare upset.

Feigner regained his winning form by beating Woodruff Edwards on Saturday, 2-1, and Archie's Pub on Sunday, 5-3. He has pitched 220 games this season.

Feigner has recorded over 700 no-hitters and has faced over 12,000,000 batters since he began his road tour in 1946.

So for the Johnny-O's team and Ruppert, who had a pair of rare triples, it was a victory they'll never forget.

Knight booster club to show grid films

The booster club at Prospect High School will again sponsor a varsity football film show the Tuesday after each game.

The Knights' game films, narrated by head coach Gary Grouwinkel, will begin about 7:30 p.m. in the cafeteria. Coffee will be served.

Childless couples band together

by LAURA SCHMALBACH

For many couples, the scene is a familiar one: the well-meaning in-laws stop by for a visit, wine flows freely and by dessert the assault has started in earnest.

"How time flies . . . married three years already," the would-be grandmother says with a slight strain to her voice. "Pretty soon I'll be out hunting for bargains on a bassinet."

Ten years ago, the hapless daughter-in-law would have little recourse but to mumble something about "maybe next year" and retreat to the kitchen. But today, thanks to the National Organization for Non-Parents (NON), the voluntarily childless couple can come out of the closet.

Organized in 1972 by "The Baby Trap" author Ellen Peck, NON now has more than 2,000 members nationwide and an Illinois roster of 50 active members. The state/local chapter, headed by Margo Haddix, Oak Park, holds meetings four times a year and has a mailing list of 250.

NON'S GROWING membership is not made up of free-wheeling, get-that-kid-out-of-my-hair baby haters, declares Ms. Haddix. Almost one-third of the members have children, and many are single. But regardless of their family or marital status, all they ask is that prospective parents take a "good, hard look at why they want children," she says.

Although NON does emphasize the over-population aspect of non-parent-hood, keeping the birth rate down is not the group's only concern. They don't split on parenthood, but they do want people to be aware that in many cases, it's just not what it's cracked up to be.

"We're not against mothers," Haddix adds with a chuckle. "But parenthood should be optional. Now, society does all but rape and impregnate you. There are so many pressures to have children — our goal is to identify them and make people aware that they exist."

TAKE A LOOK at television, Ms. Haddix suggests. Those series like "The Waltons" and "The Brady Bunch" make it seem as if the trials of parenthood mean little more than an occasional skinned knee. And as for the Clairmont pitch that shows Mommy skipping through a dewy field with her young daughter — "Come on now, what mother with an active preschooler is going to have time to flit through a meadow?" Ms. Haddix challenges.

Perhaps the day-to-day exposure to children — and the elimination of any romantic notions about them — are what has prompted several teachers to join the ranks of NON. At any rate, many do belong, along with factory workers, professional men, ministers and priests. Definitely not the shallow, selfish, neurotic type you'd expect to find, says Ms. Haddix.

"One of our members has five children, so she definitely doesn't fit the selfish image," Ms. Haddix says, "but she does agree with our philosophy. Many parents have had their eyes opened . . . nobody wants to go out and drown their kids, but more parents are admitting that they may not have made the choice they did if all the options were explored beforehand."

BUCKING THE Mom, apple pie and kids'-football-photos-on-the-desk syndrome may not be easy, but Ms. Haddix says most of NON's members are becoming more accepted by family and friends — even in that bastion of the family, the suburban subdivision. And the increasing interest in the group's philosophy leads her to believe that more and more "typical suburbanites" are questioning the child-centered lifestyle around them.

Ms. Haddix herself likes children . . . "I've babysat all my life," she explains, "but I realized that my reason for wanting children — to create a miniature me — was a pretty selfish one. When you think about it, some of the other reasons aren't much better. To 'give Johnny a sister' or 'have security' . . . someplace to go on 'Thanks-giving' just don't hold water."

Linda Wagner, a Des Plaines woman who has been married for two years, hasn't quite made up her mind about the possibility of children. But she belongs to NON because "I'd always had doubts, and this organization is a support to me."

"I JUST CAN'T find many good reasons to have children," says Mrs. Wagner. "After 'The Baby Trap' came out, I realized how many pressures there were, and children are something we just don't need right now."

Has she received much flack from her more motherly friends? Mrs. Wagner admits that co-workers needle her about being selfish for foregoing a child-centered lifestyle, but she and her husband are content with their decision.

"It all comes down to the fact that being a mother or a father isn't the ultimate goal in life," says Ms. Haddix. "There are plenty of ways to enjoy children without rearing one . . . all we're asking for is a real choice."

WMAQ's Chuck Neff

He fits his own image to a T(V)

WITH HIS FILM crew, NBC-TV health reporter Chuck Neff attended last week's Buffalo Grove-Conant high school football game to do a report on football injuries.

Neff feels particularly gratified when he gets viewer response to his health reporting.

by BILLIE BACHHUBER

Chuck Neff's TV image is that of a handsome, confident, competent health reporter. In person he more than measures up to his electronic self.

Talking to the friendly local NBC TV station's reporter was both informative and fun.

"I like being recognized, but I try not to let it go to my head," he said jokingly as he discussed his work with WMAQ-TV in Chicago.

Initially Neff wanted to be a sports announcer, but started out in news and remained there. He still covers news assignments occasionally, frequently appearing "live" on camera, such as the recent tragic airplane accident near Midway Airport.

HE BEGAN REPORTING health news in March 1975. A survey showed health to be the No. 1 concern of viewing audiences and when NBC management decided to air health news, Neff got the job. Working with a film crew and a full-time writer-producer, he does daily health reports that often are syndicated and aired nationally on NBC TV news.

To date Neff has filmed more than 250 reports running from one to five minutes. "I try to do one report a day, average about four a week," he said. "We do anything that deals with health, and we travel anywhere there's a good story."

Sometimes it's a one-spot report, other times a series, such as the three-part he did last year on "How to Brush Your Teeth." As part of that one he explored baby bottle tooth decay.

MARRIED AND FATHER of two young children, Chuck takes an active interest in their health. Recently he accompanied daughter Sarah, 5, to the dentist, and the visit rekindled his interest so he's planning another tooth story.

"Sarah's dentist told me that 60 per cent of 2-year-olds he sees have cavities," he said.

"I am going to contact oral surgeons to see just how serious childhood dental problems are; then explore the causes. Is it sugar in food? If so, why do baby food manufacturers put sugar in baby foods?"

How often should a child visit the dentist? At what age should a child start seeing the dentist? These are other questions Neff will ask.

PROVIDING CORRECT and helpful information to the public is one reward of his job. Audience reaction and interest are others.

"I did a story on narcolepsy (a deep sleep, usually not long, brought on by an epileptic attack or by an inflammation of the brain) that got unbelievable response!" he said.

"People who had been living with the ailment wrote or called in to say they didn't know what was wrong with them and to thank us."

Chuck's good looks and pleasant voice are familiar not only to national and local television viewers but to Northwest suburban residents for he lives in Arlington Heights with wife Judy, daughter Sarah and son Billy, nearly 2.

"THE NEIGHBORS' kids might think 'Wow! Sarah's daddy has a pretty neat job,' but Sarah plays it low key," Neff said, chuckling softly. "She'd rather watch 'Mr. Rogers.' And my wife is detached enough to serve as a good critic," he added.

Neff often films locally and is aided by health professionals who provide him with up-to-date information.

"I do what any good reporter does: report the experts. Whether it's politics, medicine, or whatever, if I get the correct information to the public so they understand it, I've done my job," Neff said.

"Willing to sweep floors" to get started in his chosen profession, Chuck landed his first job by perseverance. It was during Christmas vacation of his junior year at the University of Missouri that he began job hunting.

"I HAD BEEN TO every radio-TV station and newspaper in St. Louis and was on my way home. Halfway there I realized I had missed one station and turned around," he recalled.

The news director was in, welcomed Chuck and spent two hours showing him around. He advised the aspiring newsman to call in once a week and Chuck did. The result: a general assignment job for Easter vacation and the next summer, later a full-time job after getting his degree.

"I learned all the basics there. I had no real background, no hard experience. Interviewing the mayor of St. Louis, for instance, scared the hell out of me!" he said recalling his first big interview.

Married right out of college and facing the draft during the Vietnam war, Neff relocated in Terre Haute, Ind., where he worked for WTWO-TV and joined the National Guard. He attended officers' candidate school and applied the leadership philosophy he learned there to his work-a-day life.

"A GOOD LEADER listens to his people. If I have enough confidence to hire someone, I have confidence in him," Neff declared.

After two years in Indiana, the Neffs moved to Denver where Chuck joined NBC affiliate KOA-TV. Here he made the contacts that eventually brought him to Chicago and his present job.

For newcomers coming into this overcrowded field, Neff has this advice:

"THOUGH I COULDN'T wait to get out, college is a good solid base from which to start. Get a good solid job in a small market, then try for a bigger one. Springfield, Peoria and Champaign are good places to start. And be willing to listen to older, more experienced people."

Chuck recognizes his own good fortune and is grateful. Though he works hard, he now has more time for friends, travel, sports (he plays golf and tennis) and church . . . and especially his family.

"I like to go home! We have two super little kids!" he said, smiling that familiar TV, nonetheless genuine, smile.

Pros, cons of proposed food ad rules aired

by BARBARA LADD

If meat builds strong bodies and milk makes hardy bones, are both health foods? Or natural foods?

Neither or both, says the Federal Trade Commission (FTC), and consumers might be confused about what they are eating.

To remedy the confusion in semantics, the Commission has proposed a package of regulations at would wipe the phrases "natural," "organic" and "health" foods from the food advertising vocabulary. The proposals would also require printing or airing extensive nutritional information in all food advertisements — including those for ice and chewing gum. (Alcohol and infant formulas are excepted.)

HEARINGS OPENED Monday in Chicago on the proposed food advertising regulations and the FTC was met by a force of pro and con interests. The Grocer's Assn., the egg industry, advertising and "natural food" people, among others, were legally represented. Testimony ends today.

Speaking on behalf of consumers Tuesday, Sheila Skiles of the Iowa Consumers League advocated the need for regulations but felt some of the FTC recommendations were unnecessary.

"A great deal of regulations are costly and people get around them anyway," she said. "But with food we need some (regulations) to protect the consumer."

The reason, she said, is partly because the food industry now adds food-altering chemicals which increase shelf life, replace lost nutrients and make food "look nice" and taste good. Also, the number of products on the market has increased and with so much consumer confusion, many persons turn to other forms of food, including organic, health and natural foods.

BUT THE FTC regulations are just a "Band-Aid," she said. She also advocated "the moral responsibility of the food industry to educate the public on nutrition."

Mrs. Skiles continued, "There's a great misunderstanding now as to the meaning of the words 'natural' and 'organic' because they are used in so many different ways by people who put out those foods . . . But regardless of what the FTC says, those are words of our language, and we could look at Webster to determine what they mean instead of banning them."

However, another witness Tuesday, Jane Voichick, associate professor of nutritional sciences and Extension nutrition specialist at the University of Wisconsin, Madison, disagreed.

"It's my opinion that use of these words should be prohibited," Ms. Voichick said. There is no consensus to date among nutritionists as to the meaning of the words, she said.

Use of the term "health food" is also misleading, she pointed out.

"HEALTH IS A condition of a person and the term might make consumers think a certain food will give them health. But any specific food is not alone in providing health."

The food industry should be bound by some regulations on its advertising of these and other products so consumers will be provided with "factual" information, said Ms. Voichick, noting that "advertising has a significant effect on the buying and eating habits of Americans."

Although many legal counsels agreed that advertisers should be made to tow the mark on facts, they expressed dismay at the FTC's proposed regulations and said industry could control its abuses. Possible advertising deceptions should be met on a case by case basis, they maintained.

The regulations, among other things, include these other controversial points:

- Specific typed size of nutritional information in printed advertisements and full disclosure in all aired segments — including 15 second spots.
- Elimination of the words "energy" or "food energy," which actually mean "calories," unless full caloric disclosure immediately follows the claim.
- Exclusion of advertisements which claim prevention or cure of heart disease.

Column enlightened her on osteoporosis

I was enlightened by your column on "Porous bones in women." I suffer from osteoporosis of the spine and am interested in learning what proportions of sodium fluoride, calcium and vitamin D I (should take daily. Would it be possible for you to inform me what you consider a reasonable dosage? I am 61 years old and am recuperating from a bad attack of sciatica.

I have never taken calcium and do not enjoy milk. I plan to start taking calcium tablets immediately. Lately I have been reading articles on nutrition and realize as a nation we do not pay enough attention to our diets.

You should see your doctor about what you should take for your own individual case. There is a lot to the proper management of a person with dissolving bones (osteoporosis).

The Mayo Clinic reported good success using daily a combination of 50 milligrams of sodium fluoride and 600 to 1000 milligrams of calcium carbonate or gluconate supplement plus 50,000 units of vitamin D twice a week. This was reported in Postgraduate Medicine, October 1973 and Modern Medicine, March 5, 1973. In case your doctor is interested in my source for a reference.

And I am sending you The Health Letter number 6-10, Osteoporosis, to give you more information on this common problem. Others who want this issue can send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with 50 cents for it. Just send your letter to me in care of Paddock Publications, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Just what is a varicose vein and is it true that jogging causes this?

Sorry, you are getting the benefits of an article from Playboy magazine that I disagree with entirely.

Varicose veins are dilated veins, usually of the legs commonly seen in women after pregnancy. Normally there are small valves inside the leg veins to make the venous blood all flow one way, up toward the heart. When the veins dilate and overstretch, the valves don't work. The veins become nonfunctioning sacks, like over-stretched balloons, and when a person is on his feet they are full of stagnant blood.

The veins in the outside of the leg normally drain directly into the deep veins of the leg. When one stands still, there is a lot of pressure from the upright column of blood in the legs. The pressure can increase the swelling of the leg veins. But as soon as you take one step, the contracting muscles in the legs squeeze down on the deep veins and milk the blood toward the heart. The net result is that the pressure inside the veins falls dramatically with walking and hence with jogging.

Walking and jogging then, as opposed to standing still, decreases the pressure inside the veins of the legs and helps to protect against varicose veins rather than causing them. The writer of the Playboy article apparently did not consider the important difference of muscular contraction with jogging as opposed to standing still. So you and many others have been needlessly alarmed.

Practiced seamstress shares sewing hints

Dear Dorothy: I saw a lot and have a couple of handy hints for dressmakers. (1) Fold your patterns inside the direction sheet when returning to the envelope. It protects the pattern, keeps the parts you've used separated and is much easier to get in and out of the envelope. (2) I use a large-headed, long-shanked corsage pin to feed material under the presser foot on my machine when my fingers won't fit. This is especially good for gathered edges of any kind and any situation where fabric "creeps." — Mrs. Virginia Murphy

Dear Dorothy: My brother, home after being stationed in Japan, produced a recipe for fried chicken and cashew nuts. He says the dish is delicious. It calls for one teaspoon of ginger juice. Where would one find this? — Mrs. H. E. Ausmus

Get a medium-sized fresh ginger root, take off the skin, then grate with a very fine grater into a piece of cheesecloth. Squeeze the grated ginger to get out the juice. Sayoko Tomizawa says that when she lived in Japan they got the juice out this way, but she thinks the dish would taste just as good if fresh grated ginger is used.

Dear Dorothy: Had my nylon carpeting steam-shampooed. Pieces of aluminum foil were put under the feet of furniture with metal claw feet. However, the pieces weren't large enough and rust stains are evident. How can I remove these stains? — Eleanor Moller

They ought to come off by rubbing with rust soap; then sponge off with a damp cloth, rinse and dry the area. It's worked for me.

Dear Dorothy: To keep a half grapefruit fresh, place it firmly on a plastic coffee can lid, cut side down, before refrigerating. — Betsy Ward

That's some big pumpkin

"Don't nag me now," I told my dog. "I'm performing surgery on my pumpkin." I was trying to grow a 200-pound pumpkin.

I say "was" because I am losing hope that my Big Max will ever get any bigger than the dog. I was shooting for the size of Bigfoot. But then we scientists always seem to have our

My plan was this: use a variety known to produce big pumpkins, disbud each vine to a single pumpkin so all the strength is concentrated and attach a hypodermic needle—I.V. set-up to the subject. There's the wrinkle—fibers within the stem keep clogging up the I.V. Or, perhaps the pumpkin is resisting his organic diet of fish emulsion, liquid seaweed, milk and beer, although I've never heard any complaints. I chose the I.V. method over simply slitting the stem and inserting a tube because of the fear of rot.

THE BIG BLOW to my morale came when a friend called up to ask whether it was necessary to cover her pumpkins against impending frost.

I was just about to tell her about how I was trying to grow a 200-pound pumpkin, when I realized her gem was about 20 pounds bigger than mine already, and she's been too busy to even water it all summer!

So if any reader has tried force feeding pumpkins successfully and has a suggestion for preventing "fertilizer clots," write me before the snow flies.

FOR ALL THOSE readers who are crushed because I didn't run the "Biggest Tomato Contest" this year, take heart. You can enter the contest sponsored by Family Food Garden publications. You have to send them a letter describing your tomato, its weight and include a snapshot. FFG is one of the most helpful publications for vegetable gardeners on the market. It is a magazine, printed tabled on newspaper. Editorial offices and display gardens are located at 500 Hyacinth Pl., in Highland Park, Ill. Always full of new ideas, they are on top of all that is new and different in growing vegetables. (That's where I got my latest recipe — for making fruit leather.)

IF YOU'RE GOING to preserve garden goodies, try to pick up a copy of "Putting Food By" by Ruth Herzberg. She emphasizes a common-sense practicality and how-to-do it tips. Root cellaring, freezing, canning, curing, smoking, drying and maverick methods are explained. Incidentally, have you tried the new "Magic Button" Mason jars? They eliminate those "will-we-get-bottled" doubts. And Burpee Seed Catalog offers paraffin in brollable pouches, eliminating messy wax, and tabs to let you take off the wax without losing some of the jelly in the jars. It's called "Wax 'n Tabs," a good idea for making a dirty job less messy.

WEATHER PREDICTION: We're in for a snowy winter, at least up north here. The acorns are falling like hail. I nearly broke my foot walking barefoot across the lawn. While everyone else is getting ready to rake leaves, I'm raking acorns. Does anyone know what to do with acorns besides using one of Euell Gibbons' recipes?

Dinner fetes anniversary pair

A dinner party for 100 guests at the Maitre D' Restaurant in Elk Grove Village marked the golden wedding anniversary of William and Evelyn Franko, residents at 120 S. Pine in Arlington Heights since 1932.

William, a native Chicagoan, and Evelyn, who was born in Toronto, Ont., were married in Chicago Aug. 21, 1926, and celebrated their anniversary this past Aug. 20. They reared two daughters: Marilyn Gustafson, who with her husband, Vance, lives in San Diego, Calif., and Sana Eakins, who with her husband, John, lives in Minneapolis, Minn. The anniversary pair also has five grandchildren.

A FORMER TRUSTEE of the village of Arlington Heights, William is employed in sales with American Mexican Petroleum Corp., Park Ridge. Evelyn, active in PTA when the children were younger, has been a member of the Arlington Heights Woman's Club for more than 30 years. She is also a past president of her PEO chapter.

E. Ninnemanns mark 55 years of marriage

A three-day celebration marked the 55th wedding anniversary of Ernest and Birdie Ninnemann who have lived in Arlington Heights all their married life.

Ernest has actually lived in the same town most all his life, moving from Palatine to Arlington when he was a year old. The former Birdie Lynk grew up in Lake Zurich.

Their anniversary Sept. 3 started off the weekend festivities. The next day, Saturday, the Ninnemanns' three sons, William, Roger and Marvin, hosted a family dinner for them at the Arlington Park Hilton.

Then on Sept. 5 the couple held open house at 732 N. Kennicott, their home for the past 17 years. One hundred guests attended, ranging in ages from 8 to 92.

THE NINNEMANNS' only daughter, Jeanette Grupe, and her husband, Eugene, of Sarasota, Fla., could not be present but, by advance arrangements, a toast was raised at exactly 4 p.m. in Arlington Heights and Sarasota to join the family in spirit if not in person.

Ernest and Birdie were married in Chicago but their reception followed in the Arlington Heights home where they began married life. It was located next to the present Arlington Theatre.

Their son William and wife Lorraine live in Arlington Heights as does son Marvin. The other son, Roger, and his wife Darlene are nearby in Wood Dale. The Ninnemanns have 12 grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren.

Ask Andy

Praying mantis wears out 9 skins

Andy sends the Encyclopaedia Britannica's 1976 Yearbook of Science and the Future to Beverly Siscek, 13, of Mareola, Ore., for her question:

HOW OFTEN DO PRAYING MANTISES SHED THEIR SKINS?

The praying mantis is one of the most fascinating insects to watch. His large size allows us to see his intricate movements, from his famous prayingpose to his lightning-fast conquest of insect prey. Should you happen to have one in your classroom or in a cage at home, you know all about the canny way he silently creeps up on a live insect and devours it in seconds.

The praying mantis begins life as a tiny egg among hundreds of others which the female lays in the autumn. Enclosed in a snug egg case attached to a twig or weed stem, the little mantis is protected throughout the winter. One day the following spring, the band down the front of the egg case fills with shiny dark specks. These are the eyes of the babies having their first look at the big world. Within seconds the insects slide out, and soon as many as 50 may swing from threads as their soft, damp bodies seek a firm footing.

A baby praying mantis looks just like his parents except he is tan, not green. He can walk about freely and catch the juicy insects that make up his daily diet. Among these morsels are bees, flies, grasshoppers, ants and even other mantises. A superb hunter even at a tender age, he does not charge his prey with wild gusts of energy. Instead, he silently and cautiously almost glides over to where the unsuspecting victim rests.

His next movements are so fast we really can't see them. His front legs seize the prey in a viselike hold. His strong mouth parts easily handle the rest of the operation as they can puncture even the toughest insect skeleton. Always hungry, the praying mantis repeats this process as many times as possible throughout the day. In fact, this species takes the prize as the biggest glutton in the insect world.

The adult mantis usually measures from 3 to 6 inches long. On the road to maturity the spurts of growth are followed by molting. He may shed his old skin six to nine times, and each time his coloring changes slightly, too. The grown-up color is green to blend in with surrounding plants, making him hard to find.

WHERE DID EGGPLANT ORIGINATE?

Many experts who have studied the evolution of plants feel that the first crop of eggplant grew in northern India. From there it spread to China, Europe and South America. Today the delicious vegetable grows in many tropical islands and as far north as New York. The bush stands from two to six feet tall, and the egg-shaped fruit hangs among grayish-green hairy leaves. The shiny purple variety, which occasionally grows as large as a football, takes from 115 to 120 days to ripen.

Eggplant is a versatile vegetable that can be prepared in many ways — baked, fried, sauteed or broiled. You can bake it stuffed with various tempting items, serve it with any number of sauces or combine it with other vegetables for a zesty casserole.

Although eggplant has relatively few vitamins and minerals, its flavor and delightful texture make it an extremely popular dish. What's more, it is low in calories.

West misreads signal

Win at bridge

by Oswald and Jim Jacoby

If you want to use suit-preference signals, do not let them interfere with your regular signals to show count or desire to have your partner continue the suit he has just led.

North and South reach four hearts, after North responded with a Stayman two-club bid to his partner's notrump. It would have been better for North to forget Stayman and go right to the notrump game, but he did bid two clubs and get in the 4-4 heart fit.

West opened the king of diamonds and East dropped the queen. This is a well-known signal designed to show the queen and jack and give partner a chance to underlead his ace at trick two if he wishes.

West, one of those suit-preference addicts, took the play as a request to lead a spade. He did just that and declarer had no trouble making five odd.

Actually, the hand should have been beaten. West would continue with the ace and another diamond. East would overtake with the jack. If he led a fourth diamond West would be able to ruff with the 10 of hearts to establish his partner's jack as a sure trump trick.

Crowding around the turkey

Cooking for a crowd whether at home or at a church or a club may often be a challenge for those accustomed to feeding a family of two, four or six.

Roast turkey is a natural for serving a crowd as it is a favorite with most people. Served with stuffing, giblet gravy and all the traditional trimmings roast turkey is one impressive way to satisfy a group. Two 20 to 25 pound turkeys will serve 50 guests generously. Or, to make the turkey go further Turkey A La Queen, Hot Turkey Salad or the Special Hot Turkey Sandwiches are other suggestions. Turkey Quiche makes a perfect appetizer for an open house or reception. Those special recipes along with many more for main dishes, salads, sandwiches, desserts and appetizers appear in a new publication.

What to serve a crowd, how much to buy and how to prepare it are all included in a new booklet, "Cooking For A Crowd." The recipes are varied and all are keyed to home style equipment. The number of servings in some recipes are for as many as 50 while others are just for 12. For your copy of "Cooking For A Crowd," write Martha Logan, Swift & Company, 1919 Swift Drive, Oak Brook, Illinois 60521.

QUICHE LORRAINE

Pastry:

- ¾ cups shortening
- 2 cups flour, sifted
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 3 to 4 tablespoons ice water

Filling:

- ½ cup cooked, crumbled bacon
- 1½ cups turkey, roasted and chopped
- 2 cups Swiss cheese, shredded
- 2 tablespoons onion, finely chopped
- 8 eggs
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 2 cups whipping cream

To make pastry, sift flour with salt. Cut shortening into flour to size of small peas. Add water, mixing with a fork. Pour onto wax paper and form into a ball. Let stand 15 minutes before rolling. Roll to a 14 by 18 inch rectangle and place in a lightly greased jelly roll pan, pressing onto the sides, being careful not to stretch the pastry. Trim pastry even with the edges of the pan. Prick with a fork. To keep the bottom from puffing, place a buttered piece of aluminum foil over the pastry, pressing lightly into the sides. Bake in 400 degree oven for 10 minutes. Remove the foil and bake 3 minutes longer. Cool.

To fill, sprinkle bacon over crust, then turkey, Swiss cheese and onion. Beat eggs at high speed until frothy. Add salt and cream. Pour over mixture in pan. Bake in 375 degree oven 25 minutes or until table knife inserted halfway to the center comes out clean. Let stand 10 to 15 minutes before serving. Makes 126 appetizer squares.

Fall vegetables

Savory Squash and Apple Pie

Apples are one of nature's incomparable delights eaten out of hand or savored in delicious hot specialties, and versatile apples combine well with many vegetables in side dishes — as well as desserts — that have autumn appeal. Try teaming them with butternut squash, parsnips or white turnips — perfect partners guaranteed to perk up almost any menu.

Savory Squash and Apple Pie is a delectable blend of taste and texture. It uses butternut, a "winter" squash. But don't let that term fool you. The United Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Association points out that butternut squash, although it does peak in fall, is available most of the year.

THIS SQUASH SHOULD have a thin, hard skin and a buff to light tan color. Butternut squash is rich in vitamin A, and low in sodium and calories — which makes it invaluable for special diets.

Pep-up family dinners with parsnips. For an old-fashioned treat try Candied Parsnips and Apples, a dish that's sweet, nutritious and easy to make — and impressive enough to serve last minute guests.

Parsnips are also delicious by themselves; simply scrub them, steam in the skin and serve with butter. They have a nutty, taste and tender, smooth texture. This root vegetable is usually packaged in cellophane bags, like carrots and should be ivory to buff in color and small to medium in size. You'll be glad to know, parsnips are a good source of vitamin A, phosphorus, calcium and other nutrients.

If you're looking for a fresh casserole idea, try Apple and Turnip au Gratin — a marvelous mixture of good taste and good nutrition. Turnips are a fine source of vitamin C, and their greens are especially rich in vitamin A.

The recipe calls for white turnips, and like parsnips, they should be firm and smooth. If you buy them with their tops on, make sure the leaves are fresh, green and crisp.

SAVORY SQUASH AND APPLE PIE

- 1 large butternut squash
- ½ cup soft butter or margarine
- ¼ cup sugar
- ¼ cup packed brown sugar
- 3 eggs, separated
- 2 tablespoons finely chopped fresh onion
- 1 tablespoon fresh lemon juice
- ¼ cup flour
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon dried leaf thyme
- 1 cup diced pared, cored, Red or Golden Delicious apple
- 1 unbaked 9-inch pastry shell

Cut butternut squash in half lengthwise remove seeds and place cut side down in baking pan. Add enough water to cover bottom of pan. Bake in 375 degree oven 40 minutes, or until squash is tender. Remove from oven and cool. Scoop out pulp from squash to yield 2 cups. In large mixing bowl cream butter and sugars. Beat in egg yolks, onion, lemon juice, flour, salt, thyme and squash pulp. In small mixing bowl beat egg whites until stiff peaks form; fold into squash mixture along with diced apples. Turn into pastry shell. Bake in 375 degree oven 1 hour, or until knife inserted in center of pie comes out clean. Let stand 10 minutes before cutting to serve. Makes 8 servings.

CANDIED PARSNIPS AND APPLES

- 2 pounds parsnips, pared and diagonally sliced
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 2 Red Delicious apples, cored and sliced (do not pare)
- ¼ cup sugar
- ¼ cup honey
- 1 teaspoon grated fresh lemon rind
- 2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- ½ teaspoon ginger

Place pared parsnips in 1 inch boiling salted water in saucepan, cover and simmer 20 minutes or until tender. Drain. In large skillet melt butter, add parsnips and apples, and stir in remaining ingredients. Cover and cook over low heat 10 to 15 minutes or until apples are tender. Makes 4 servings.

APPLE AND TURNIP AU GRATIN

- 1 pound small white turnips, pared and cubed
- ¼ pound bacon
- ¼ cup chopped fresh onion
- 2 Red or Golden Delicious apples, cored and thinly sliced
- 1 teaspoon fresh lemon juice
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- 1/8 teaspoon pepper
- ¼ teaspoon dried leaf thyme
- 1 cup (4 ounces) shredded Cheddar cheese

Place turnips in 1 inch boiling water in saucepan, cover and simmer 20 minutes, or until turnips are tender. Drain. In large skillet cook bacon until lightly browned, remove, drain and crumble. Pour off all but 1 tablespoon bacon fat. Add onion to skillet and cook until tender. Add turnips, apple, lemon juice, salt, sugar, pepper, thyme and crumbled bacon; mix well. Turn into 1-½ quart baking dish; sprinkle with cheese. Bake in 375 degree oven 20 minutes. Makes 4 servings.

Taught by Elaine Sherman, the two-session course on Tuesday afternoons, Sept. 28 and Oct. 5, and on Thursday evenings, Sept. 30 and Oct. 7, demonstrates how to poach, sauté, bake and broil fish. Low calorie and low cholesterol dinner preparations as well as a clam bake and live lobster cooking will be included.

Ms. Sherman will also teach a twin series, Basic Gourmet Cooking, an eight-week course that presents the fundamentals of classic cuisine preparation. The afternoon course begins Tuesday, Oct. 12; the evening class, Thursday, Oct. 14.

Microwave cooking, taught by Karen Roth, is a three-evening demonstration program featuring a wide variety of foods for cooking and sampling. The class will be held Friday nights, starting Oct. 29.

Three single-session classes in bread making are also included on the fall schedule. Taught by breadbaking expert Bertie Selinger, the first demonstration is sweet and dinner rolls on Oct. 22, followed by English muffins and variety uses for fried bread dough, Nov. 28. Completing the list is holiday specials, including plum pudding and sweet bread for brunch and gift-giving. Each is an afternoon session.

Single classes are $8; the series range in cost from $15 to $40. Afternoon classes are 1 to 3; evening 7:30 to 9:30. For further information or to register readers should call MONACEP 967-5821.

Rich lemon bars easy to make when time is short

With a few extra minutes from caring for a new baby and two older children, Susan Foster, Prospect Heights, whips up rich, lemony bars to have on hand for desserts, parties, snacks and lunchboxes. All she needs are two packaged mixes and a couple of added ingredients.

Another of Susan's specialties, Swedish Meat Balls, takes a bit more time but is a treat for her husband, Rick. Dill weed predominately seasons the meat, while nutmeg, allspice, cardamom and onion blend into additional flavor.

To save time, Susan browns the meat balls in the oven, then bakes them in a gravy made with beef broth and cream, also seasoned with dill. Served with cooked noodles and a tossed salad, this is a savory dinner for both family and guests.

AS A CHANGE from an ordinary salad, Susan likes to make Artichokes a la Grecque. She uses either canned or cooked frozen artichokes, and marinates them in a piquant sauce. Because the marinade is heated, it quickly permeates the artichokes, allowing a 10 minute serving time. However, Susan prefers chilling them for several hours, and serves the artichokes cold on lettuce leaves. It's an excellent accompaniment for a beef roast or steak.

Active in the PTA at Euclid School, Susan has as hobbies tennis and reading. She makes a concerted effort to try at least one new recipe each week, and particularly enjoys cooking for company.

EASY CHEESY LEMON BARS

Crust:
1 (18 ounce) package lemon cake mix
1 egg
1/4 pound softened margarine
Mix ingredients together with electric beater and press into an ungreased 9 by 13-inch pan.
Filling and frosting:
1 box lemon frosting mix
1 large package (8 ounces) cream cheese, softened
2 eggs

Mix the frosting mix and cream cheese together with electric beater. Add the eggs and beat well. Set aside 3/4 cup of this mixture. Spread remainder over mixture in pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 25 to 30 minutes. When cool, frost with the 3/4 cup mixture that was set aside. Store in refrigerator. Cut in bars to serve.

SWEDISH MEAT BALLS

1/2 cup finely chopped onion
2 tablespoons margarine
1/2 cup dry bread crumbs
1 cup milk
2 eggs, slightly beaten
1 pound ground chuck
1/4 pound ground pork
1-3/4 teaspoon salt

A LEMON CAKE MIX, an egg and margarine make up the crust of Susan Foster's Easy Cheesy Lemon Bars. The filling consists of a box of lemon frosting mix, cream cheese and eggs, and bakes into a pleasingly rich treat.

3/4 teaspoon dill weed
1/4 teaspoon allspice
1/8 teaspoon nutmeg
1/8 teaspoon cardamom
3 tablespoons flour
1/8 teaspoon pepper
1 can (10 1/4 ounces) beef broth
1/2 cup half and half
In skillet, melt margarine and saute onions.

In a large bowl, combine eggs, milk and bread crumbs. Add sauted onion, ground chuck and pork and mix well. Add 1 1/2 teaspoons salt, 1/4 teaspoon dill, allspice, nutmeg and cardamom and mix well. Refrigerate, covered, one hour.

Shape into balls about one-inch in diameter and place on cookie sheet. Brown at 375 degrees about 15 minutes. Place meat balls into a two-quart casserole.

Measure 2 tablespoons drippings and put in skillet with the flour, remaining 1/4 teaspoon salt and pepper. Stir to blend. Add the broth slowly, stirring constantly. Add the cream and remaining 1/2 teaspoon dill. Pour over meat balls and bake, covered, at 325 degrees for 30 minutes. Serve with cooked noodles. Serves 6.

ARTICHOKE HEARTS A LA GRECQUE

1 package (8 ounces) frozen artichoke hearts, or a large can, drained
1/3 cup olive oil
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 small clove garlic, crushed
1 small bay leaf
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon thyme
1/8 teaspoon powdered coriander
Dash of pepper

Place artichoke hearts in a bowl. Mix remaining ingredients together in a saucepan and heat until hot. Pour over artichoke hearts. Marinate as little as 10 minutes or chill for several hours. Serve warm or cold. Drain and place on lettuce leaves, figuring about three per individual salad. Or add to a tossed salad.

Macaroni, noodles stretch budget

Macaroni and egg noodles stretch any food budget and make tasty, pleasing dishes with little effort. Don't be afraid to add different ingredients to a chicken salad for a change. For example, toss in some raisins, curry powder and salted peanuts to make a hot macaroni chicken salad a new favorite on your block. Or add some sour cream and a dash of dry mustard and olives to a one-pot macaroni and meat creation. The egg noodles go into a buffet favorite — a quick beef Stroganoff.

ONE POT CREAMY MACARONI AND MEAT

1/2 cup chopped onion (about 1 medium onion)
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1/2 teaspoon pepper
1/2 teaspoon dry mustard
3 1/2 cups water
2 cups uncooked elbow macaroni (8 ounces)
1/3 cup sliced pimiento-stuffed olives
1 can (12 ounces) luncheon meat, diced
1 1/2 cups dairy sour cream
1 cup grated Swiss cheese (about 4 ounces)

In 3-quart saucepan, saute onion in butter until golden. Add seasonings and water; bring to a boil. Gradually add macaroni so that water continues to boil. Cover and simmer for 12 to 15 minutes or until macaroni is tender; stir frequently. (Most of cooking liquid should be absorbed).

Stir in olives, luncheon meat and sour cream until combined. Cook, uncovered, over very low heat for about 5 minutes or just until mixture is heated through; stir occasionally. Stir in cheese until melted. Turn into warm serving dish. If desired, garnish with additional pimiento-stuffed olive slices. Serve immediately. Makes 6 servings.

EGG NOODLES WITH QUICK BEEF STROGANOFF

3 tablespoons chopped onion
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
2 cans (10 1/2 ounces each) condensed cream of mushroom soup, undiluted
1 can (3 ounces) sliced mushrooms, undrained
1 cup dairy sour cream
1/2 teaspoon celery salt
3 cups diced leftover beef
8 ounces medium egg noodles (about 4 cups)
1 tablespoon salt
3 quarts boiling water

Saute onion in butter until crisp-tender. Blend in soup, undrained mushrooms, sour cream and celery salt. Add beef and heat to serving temperature.

Meanwhile, gradually add noodles and salt to rapidly boiling water so that water continues to boil. Cook uncovered, stirring occasionally, until tender. Drain in colander. Serve topped with beef mixture. Makes 4 servings.

HOT MACARONI CHICKEN SALAD

12 ounces elbow macaroni (about 3 cups)
1 1/2 tablespoons salt
4 to 5 quarts boiling water
1/2 cup golden seedless raisins
1/2 cup chicken broth or bouillon
3 cups julienne cooked chicken
1/2 cup chopped red onion
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/2 to 3/4 teaspoon curry powder

Snack costs

Americans spent about $1 billion on potato chips in 1974, or as much as they spent on breakfast cereals during the same period, according to the Consumer Education program of New York State's Cooperative Extension service. During the same period, they spent almost $5 billion on other snack foods and almost $8 million on soft drinks. By comparison, they spent only $4.8 billion on fresh fruits, which are much more nutritious than the snacks and soda pop.

New to job soon learn efficiency

I once wrote a short story that began, "There were times when she felt like a pie that had been divided into four parts — one for each of her three children, one for her husband and none for her."

There are a lot of women who feel like that today. For some, it's time to seek a little economic independence and emotional support away from the family environment.

The rest of us who have already taken the plunge wish you luck. It won't be easy the first few weeks trying to cope with a new schedule.

You will be determined that everything around the house will get done exactly as if you weren't working. You will probably drive yourself to exhaustion by vacuuming floors at 6 a.m. before common sense prevails and you look for short cuts.

The easiest place to save time is in meal preparation. Planning two meals at a time can really work. And try to use leftover meat in ways that don't look like leftover meat. Egg rolls are a good example.

I'll give you my recipe for pork rolls, which uses 2 or more cups of leftover pork roast. Do the pork roast simply with just garlic powder, salt and pepper. Egg roll skins may be found in supermarket freezer sections.

PORK EGG ROLLS
2½ cups chopped cooked pork
4 ounces canned water chestnuts, chopped
1 package frozen chopped spinach, thawed and squeezed dry
2 tablespoons grated onion
3 tablespoons soy sauce
Oil for frying
1 package frozen egg roll skins
1 beaten egg
Bottled sweet sour sauce
Coleman's dry mustard

Mix first five ingredients. Thaw 12 of the egg roll skins and refreeze the rest. Place one generous tablespoon of the pork mixture in the center of a skin. Moisten all the edges with beaten egg. Fold the side nearest you to center, over filling. Fold two sides in about 1 inch. Fold back edge toward you overlapping all. Press all edges to seal. These rolls can be made the night before and will be ready for cooking after refrigeration.

To cook, fry in about 1 inch of oil until brown, turning once. Serve with sweet sauce and hot mustard sauce made by mixing dry mustard with a little water. Makes 12 rolls, enough for 4 to 6 persons.

Pick a pear for fall menu

No matter what the occasion is, fresh Western Bartlett pears are sure to find a place. This Sour Cream Pear Pie is a perfect example. The filling combines juicy chunks of fresh Bartlett pears and golden raisins in a rich sour cream custard. Served warm, it is creamy and sweet; served chilled it is smooth and refreshing.

There is no need to peel fresh Bartlett pears since the skins are delicately tender and add pleasant color as well as good flavor.

Mountain grown Bartlett pears come from the West where they receive the right combination of sunshine and rain to produce plump, flavorful pears. They are picked green and allowed to ripen off the tree. When the skin reaches a golden hue, it means the pears have reached their peak in quality and flavor.

SOUR CREAM PEAR PIE

5 fresh Western Bartlett pears
½ cup golden raisins
1 tablespoon lemon juice
2 eggs
¾ cup light brown sugar
1 cup dairy sour cream
Unbaked 9-inch pastry shell
Melted butter

Reserve ½ pear to slice for garnish. Core and dice remaining pears, but do not peel. Combine diced pears and raisins. Sprinkle with lemon juice. Beat eggs. Blend in brown sugar and sour cream. Combine with fruits and turn into unbaked pastry shell. Garnish with reserved pear slices. Bake pear slices with melted butter. Bake at 375 degrees 1 hour or until knife inserted near center comes out clean. Makes 1 pie.

Jewish food not always Kosher

by JEANNE LESEM

Americans who talk of "Jewish food" are apt to mention corned beef and pastrami sandwiches, bagels, blintzes, gefilte fish and chicken soup with matzo balls. Delicatessens even in small cities stock the meats, and supermarket food freezers and canned food shelves, the remainder.

All these foods are typically Jewish in contemporary America, but they're no more solely Jewish than apple pie is native American.

Apple pie is part of our English heritage. Jewish food is basically food from all the nations where Jews have lived since Biblical times, in Asia, Africa and Australia, as well as Europe and the Americas.

All of the aforementioned "Jewish foods" are adaptations of European dishes, largely Eastern European. Centuries ago, Europeans routinely salted and spiced most of their meat to preserve it. Corned beef is brined before cooking, pastrami is brined and heavily peppered.

BAGELS (PETRIFIED doughnuts was my childhood name for them) are heavy-textured bread dough rings that are boiled before baking. Blintzes are cheese or fruit-filled thin pancakes. Gefilte fish is fish dumplings that strongly resemble those of Scandinavia and Eastern Europe. Properly made matzo balls, another heritage from Eastern Europe, are featherlight dumplings of eggs and matzo meal, the unleavened cracker meal of Jewish origin. The matzos from which they are made commemorate the unleavened bread the Hebrews baked during their flight from Pharaoh's Egypt, when they had no time to wait for dough to rise.

With the exception of matzos and matzo products and a few sacramental and traditional foods linked to religious holidays, Jews for centuries have adapted the food of their native or adoptive nations to their religious dietary laws.

For example, Asian Jews cook Japanese sukiyaki, Latin American or Spanish Jews, arroz con pollo, and Middle Eastern Jews, shish kebabs, substituting nondairy for dairy products in meat and poultry dishes as required by dietary law.

EVEN SOME sacramental foods differ, depending on the background of the family observing a particular holiday. Ashkenazic Jews, whose heritage is largely eastern and western European, traditionally make and eat hamantaschen, or cookies with poppy-seed filling, for the holiday of Purim; Sephardic Jews, who lived in Spain and Portugal before and during its occupation by Moslems in the eighth century A.D., make huevos de haman instead: hard-boiled eggs in pastry baskets, and desserts such as baklava, a Middle Eastern pastry.

The sacramental foods of Passover, the Jews' great holiday of freedom from bondage in Egypt, also differ. For example, Sephardics use romaine lettuce instead of parsley for the bitter herb of Ashkenazic tradition, celery leaves or endive instead of horseradish and a glass of wine or vinegar instead of salt water for dipping the bitter herb.

Jewish food as we know it today isn't even necessarily kosher. That term refers to food prepared according to dietary law, to conform to strict rules of slaughter of meat and poultry, and strict standards of sanitation in preparation and packing. Kosher food also requires no mixing of meat or poultry and dairy products at any meal. If a meat recipe calls for butter, Jews who keep a kosher household substitute vegetable oil or margarine; they also use nondairy substitutes for milk and cream.

PORK AND SHELLFISH are forbidden altogether, and only the fore-quarters of cud-chewing quadrupeds such as cattle and sheep are allowed. Most domestic fowl such as chicken, turkey, ducks, geese, pigeon and quail are permitted, but not scavengers or birds of prey.

Orthodox and Conservative Jews follow the letter of dietary law, but growing numbers of Reform Jews, who have assimilated into the American mainstream have adopted its eating habits as well. For instance, you will find cheesecake ending a meat meal, shrimp a popular appetizer or main dish ingredient and beef eaten rare. Although forbidden by dietary law.

Almost every Jewish-American cook today has her own special cheesecake recipe (another Eastern European heritage), and cookie recipes handed down from generation to generation. Perhaps the one thing that distinguishes Jewish cookery from all the other cuisines America has taken for its own, is individualism: there probably are as many different recipes for each family favorite as there are cooks to make them. Even a daughter preparing her mother's and grandparents' handed-down recipes is apt to add her own personal touch. (United Press International)

Rosh Hashanah

A time to feast and celebrate

The High Holy Days, opening with Rosh Hashanah, will begin this year on Sept. 25 and end 10 days later with Yom Kippur. During this 10-day period of profound religious observance families will be gathered for feasting and quiet celebration.

Serve a festive autumn menu on the eve of Rosh Hashanah this year. Orange Honey Chicken and Cauliflower Creme make a delicious holiday two-some.

The colorful chicken dish is made by brushing chicken pieces with a mixture of peanut oil, honey, orange peel, ginger and salt before roasting. Cauliflower Creme is an elegant dish that consists of a whole head of cooked cauliflower drizzled with a creamy sauce flavored with nutmeg and chicken broth.

Top off your festive autumn menu with Sweet Potato Cake. This moist, golden cake is laced with cinnamon, nutmeg and cloves and studded with chopped pecans. Peanut oil is used as the shortening.

ORANGE HONEY CHICKEN

1/3 cup peanut oil
1/4 cup honey
1 tablespoon grated orange peel
2 teaspoons ground ginger
Dash salt
1 (3-1/2 pound) chicken, cut-up
Orange slices
Combine peanut oil, honey, orange peel, ginger and salt. Arrange chicken in baking dish and brush with honey mixture.
Roast at 350 degrees 1 to 1 1/2 hours, or until done, basting occasionally with honey mixture. Garnish with orange slices. Serves 4.

CAULIFLOWER CREME

1 cup water
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 medium head cauliflower, washed, outer leaves and stalk removed 2 tablespoons peanut oil
2 tablespoons flour
1/8 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon ground nutmeg

Dash pepper
1 cup chicken broth
1 egg yolk, slightly beaten
2 tablespoons chopped parsley

In a large saucepan bring water and salt to a boil. Add cauliflower; bring to a boil. Cover and cook over medium heat until tender, about 20 to 25 minutes. Remove from saucepan. Place on serving dish. Keep warm.

In a small heavy saucepan blend together peanut oil, flour, salt, nutmeg and pepper. Cook over low heat, stirring until mixture is smooth and bubbly. Remove from heat and gradually stir in chicken broth. Return to heat and bring mixture to a boil, stirring constantly. Remove from heat. Pour some of hot mixture into egg yolk. Blend well. Pour yolk mixture back into broth mixture. Bring to a boil, stirring constantly. Stir in parsley. Pour over cauliflower. Serves 4 to 6.

SWEET POTATO CAKE

2 cups un sifted flour
2 1/4 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon baking soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1 teaspoon ground nutmeg
1/2 teaspoon ground cloves
4 eggs, separated
2 cups sugar
1 cup peanut oil
1 1/2 cups shredded raw sweet potatoes
1 cup chopped pecans
1/3 cup hot water
Confectioner's sugar

Combine flour, baking powder, baking soda, salt, cinnamon, nutmeg and cloves. Stir to blend well; set aside.

Beat egg whites in small mixer bowl until soft peaks form; set aside.

In large mixer bowl combine sugar and peanut oil. Beat until well blended. Add egg yolks one at a time, beating well after each addition. Mix in sweet potatoes and pecans. Alternately blend in dry ingredients and hot water. Fold in egg whites. Turn batter into a greased and floured 12-cup Bundt pan.

Bake at 350 degrees about 55 minutes, or until done. Cool in pan on wire rack 10 minutes. Turn out onto rack to finish cooling. Sprinkle with confectioner's sugar. Makes one large Bundt cake.

Crepe cookers not new

by JEANNE LESEM

If you think a crepe maker is a fabric manufacturer serving the funeral industry, you haven't been near a housewares department recently.

One of the hottest new home appliances, figuratively and literally, makes crepes, or French pancakes. They're almost thin enough to see through, and the best way in the world to pass off leftovers as a fancy European dish. Just wrap the leftovers in crepes and serve with a sauce or browned cheese topping.

OLD-FASHIONED CREPE pans have been around for decades in fancy housewares stores in the United States and even longer in Europe. To the uninformed, they look like a small frying pan with straight instead of curved sides.

Most of the new electric crepe makers are designed to be inverted, dipped in batter and cooked in that inverted position. Unfortunately, the ones we have tried require considerable practice to produce crepes without holes through which filling can escape. Because they are cooked on only one side, they tend to be rubbery, compared with crepes made traditionally.

Nobody really needs a special pan, electric or otherwise, to make crepes. Any 7-inch skillet will do as well. Even better, said a UPI colleague of mine, who made a decorative wall-hanging of his wife's new upturned-down nonelectric crepe maker after she spent a whole evening trying unsuccessfully to use it as the manufacturer directed. She has returned to the frying pan method, but thousands of other Americans are snapping up the new electric crepe makers, well, hotcakes.

MANUFACTURERS AND BUYERS at the 65th semiannual housewares show in Chicago had mixed reactions to the latest models of the appliance that is designed to fill a need most of us didn't know we had.

A buyer from a major Los Angeles store and another from a major Minneapolis store see big sales this fall, but one St. Louis buyer thinks the peak has passed already, and a spokesman for a nationwide discount chain thinks the market is very limited.

Introducing a multipurpose crepe maker in New York City recently, one manufacturer predicted that a dozen or more different brands would be in retail stores by the end of the year. His particular model is used bottom side up to make crepes on a specially-designed hot plate that can be used like a regular hotplate only for the crepe pan. Right side up, the pan becomes a hamburger or sandwich grill, or a bacon-and-eggs cooker.

Industry sources said college and university students, singles and other small households are prominent in the market for hamburger cookers, slow cookers and other small kitchen appliances.

Times change but same recipes stay

Food preservation has a long tradition in America, and many homemakers this year are interested in reviving old recipes. Mary Lou Williamson, director of Ball Corporation's Consumer Service, has had numerous requests for information about traditional home canning recipes, and she first points out particular problems to home canners.

Old recipes may be difficult to follow because of vagueness in measuring directions. They also frequently call for open-kettle preparation, a method no longer recommended for home canning.

Mrs. Williamson also reminds homemakers that tastes have changed, and older recipes are often highly seasoned. However, four old-time recipes are still quite popular, very tasty and a lot of fun, she said. They can be recommended because they are nicely suited to today's canning methods. She feels homemakers everywhere will enjoy the simplicity of these recipes, and the tasty product that results.

GREEN GRAPE MARMALADE

2 quarts green grapes
1 lime, sliced
8 cups granulated sugar
2 cups water
Wash, stem and measure young grapes. (The seed should be formed, but not hardened.) Add lime, and water to grapes, cook until grapes are soft. Add the sugar and boil mixture until thick. Pour hot mixture into hot jars, leaving 1/4 inch headspace. Adjust caps. Process in a water bath canner for 15 minutes. Makes about 4 half pints.

INDIA RELISH

12 cups tomatoes, peeled and chopped
3 cups celery, chopped
2 cups onions, chopped
1/4 cup salt
2 pints vinegar
3 cups brown sugar
1/3 cup mustard seed
2 red peppers, chopped
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1/4 teaspoon ground allspice
1/4 teaspoon ground cloves
Allow the tomatoes, celery, onions and salt to stand for two hours. Add the rest of the ingredients and cook until the mixture is thickened. Fill hot jars leaving 1/4 inch headspace. Adjust caps. Process in a water bath canner for 15 minutes. Makes about 10 pints.

SWEET PICKLED CARROTS

2 cups vinegar
1 cup sugar
2 tablespoons mixed spices
2 packages carrots
Select young and even-sized carrots, boil until tender and pack into clean, hot jars. Fill the jars with hot pickling syrup made by boiling together for 5 minutes the vinegar, sugar and mixed spices. Arrange carrots in hot jars, leaving 1/4 inch headspace. Adjust caps. Process in a water bath canner for 30 minutes. Yield about 4 half pints.

STRAWBERRY-RHUBARB JAM

4 cups rhubarb, chopped
7 cups granulated sugar
4 cups strawberries, hulled
Wash and cut about 2 1/2 pounds unpeeled rhubarb into 1/2 inch pieces. Wash and hull one quart of berries. Measure four cups of each into large kettle.

Add sugar. Slowly bring to boil, stirring only occasionally. When sugar dissolves, start stirring frequently to prevent sticking. Cook rapidly until thick.

Remove from heat. Skim off any foam. Pour, boiling hot, into hot jars, leaving 1/4 inch headspace. Adjust caps. Process in a water bath canner for 15 minutes. Yield about 10 half pints.

Food storage

Don't store fresh produce or canned goods beneath your kitchen sink, say Extension specialists from Cornell University. Leakage from water and drain pipes can damage the products. Cans and jar lids may rust and deteriorate, providing a feast for growing germs.

Food storage also should be away from a heat source such as oven or range. A cool, dry spot, preferably in an unheated area, is ideal.

DOMINICK'S KITCHEN FEATURES...

Care urged after canning season

There has been advice galore this summer about how to can and preserve fruits and vegetables to make them safe as well as savory.

Now in the lull after the home-canning storm, families are being reminded that safety precautions should not have ended when the last jar lid popped the signal that a firm seal had been established on the succotash or piccalilli.

At least 8 million home gardens were tilled, planted and harvested in America this year, partly to counter inflation. The produce from many has gone into larders in jars and freezer bags, along with tons of fruits and vegetables bought at the height of the season.

THIS CANNING BOOM has prompted the Department of Safety and Research of the Combined Insurance Company of America to urge that as much care be taken in consumption as should have been taken in production.

Of particular importance is the deadly botulism toxin that can lurk in low acid vegetables such as beans, corn, zucchini, cabbage, carrots and peppers, particularly when they have not been cooked under pressure.

To help promote dinner table safety, Combined's experts recommended a few simple precautions.

• When someone gives you the home canned results of a backyard garden, do not hesitate to inquire if the jams, preserves or vegetables have been subjected to boiling water baths after being placed in jars. In the case of vegetables — even tomatoes, which are sometimes low in acid — they should have been cooked under pressure. If the answer is "no," thank the donor and throw out the gift later.

• If home canners follow the advice of Agriculture Department authorities, they will have used self-sealing caps with screw bands. The bands may be set aside for future use when the seal is set, but the lids should be discarded as soon as they have been removed.

• Examine each jar before opening. If there is a bulging lid, a break in the seal, any sign of mold or indications of fermentation bubbles, don't taste. Boil the contents for about 20 minutes and then if you have any doubts, throw the jar and contents into the garbage.

• Do not be concerned about a black deposit that may develop on the underside of the lid. Some foods contain elements that cause these stains even in a well-processed, thoroughly sealed jar.

• The odor of preserved food should be the same as it was before it was placed in the jar. If it does not smell just right, if it seems soggy, cloudy or spurts when you make a hole in the lid, throw it out — and in a place where no human or animal can touch it. Wash your hands thoroughly, as well as the utensil you used to open the jar. Scrub the surface on which you were working. Botulism may be present.

Storage of canned goods is important, too. Combined's safety experts recommended they should be kept in a dark, dry place at a temperature of 70 degrees or less. Refrigerated foods should be held at a maximum of 40 degrees, while frozen fruits and vegetables are best at zero Fahrenheit.

Vegetables receive awards

So you think that Hollywood stars are the only ones to receive Oscars? Well, guess again. Vegetables get them, too. We offer belated congratulations to the Aristocrat, a new hybrid zucchini, winner of the All-American Vegetable Award for 1973. Zucchini is a summer squash like the crook-neck, straight-neck and patipon. Summer squash grow quickly and the fruits are young and tender, delicate to the taste. Winter squash, like butternut, acorn and Hubbard, taste richer because they grow slower. Anyone for squash tennis?

They sure don't make ice cream like they used to, do they? They don't serve it like they used to, either. A hundred years ago, ice cream was considered so special they served it in a very fancy manner. They put it in pewter molds — in shapes like hearts for Valentine's Day, the flag for July fourth, a lily for Easter and Santa Claus for Christmas. On ordinary days, they shaped the ice cream like famous people, soldiers, ships, fruits and flowers and other things. But one thing they don't have that we have is a Heinz variety of flavors — like peanut butter and jelly, cold duck, jamocha. So what flavor would you like to have? Now please don't answer me with that old cliché: I don't care what flavor it is so long as it's chocolate (or vanilla or strawberry or what-over). One thing sure: You scream, I scream, we all scream for ice cream.

If you believe that fingers were made before forks, then believe this. Peas were here before history began. Popular since the days of the caveman in the Stone and Bronze Ages, peas were found preserved in the mud where Swiss lake dwellers lived 5,000 years ago. Yet the Chinese claim they were the ones who originated peas in their land. Peas became famous in the time of Louis XIV, who considered them "a fashion and a madness." The ladies of the court ate peas for dinner, then ate them later as a bedtime snack. A young unmarried noblewoman would search for a pod with nine peas. When she found it she'd place it over the doorway to her bedroom and the first lad who passed under it would become her bridegroom. Catching a man in those days could be duck soup. I mean pea soup.

Sun storms send TV viewers bad vibes

by PAUL GORES
What's causing those black, wavy lines on your television set when it's tuned to WBBM-TV, Channel 2? The answer is probably 93 million miles away.
Costation interference, or "venetian blinds" as TV repairmen call it, are the result of atmospheric conditions caused by storms on the sun.
One local television repairman said sun storms, which appear as spots on the sun's surface, give off a tremendous amount of energy which ionizes upper layers of the atmosphere and causes them to reflect TV signals normally lost to the atmosphere.

As a result, TV signals from stations as far as 1,000 miles away are reflected and picked up by low-channel receivers, such as Channel 2.
"SO WHAT YOU'RE really seeing is probably a station from Milwaukee or somewhere trying to come in on Channel 2," he said. "And there's nothing you can do about it." This type of interference occurs most as seasons change.
Several area residents have complained within the last two weeks about black, wavy lines on Channel 2. Citizens' Band radios or some other type of electrical source were suspected as the cause.

L. A. Pierce, director of the technical department for CBS in Chicago, agreed sun storms are probably the source of interference.
"It is characteristic of low frequencies such as Channel 2 to pick up signals from stations as far as 1,000 miles away," Pierce said.
Nothing can be done to eliminate or reduce interference caused by sun storms, Pierce said.

Bolek predicts

'City will not apply for upgrade funds'

by JOE FRANZ
Des Plaines Mayor Charles J. Bolek Wednesday said he does not think it is likely the city will apply for $160,000 to $170,000 in 1978 under the U.S. Housing and Community Development Act.
The city council passed up $469,000 during the program's first two years and Bolek said he does not foresee much change in the attitudes of aldermen in regard to applying during the third year.

"My guess is that the city won't apply for the funds because I don't think there is enough support on the city council," he said.
The city council voted 12-3 against applying for $139,000 in 1976 funds under the program and 9-6 against applying for $330,000 in 1977 funds.
"THE LAST TIME we considered this, a pretty good majority of the council was against it," Bolek said. "The makeup of the council hasn't changed since the last vote so I don't see much of a change."

Under the federal program, the city could use the funds for public improvements to benefit low and moderate income families and to prevent the deterioration of present housing.
If the city had participated in the program from the start it would have been eligible for $2.5 million over a six-year period.

Lag Drug Co. strike ends; no details on settlement

The six-week-old strike by 120 Teamsters Union employees against the Lag Drug Co., 301 N. Third St., Des Plaines, has ended.
Raymond Hamilton, business representative and trustee for the International Brotherhood of Teamsters 743, said the union reached agreement with the company Monday afternoon and the striking employees returned to work Tuesday.

He refused to release details of the settlement. "The strike is over, but that is about all I can say," he said.

Voter signup ends Friday at city hall

Des Plaines residents may register to vote for the Nov. 2 general election through Friday at the Des Plaines Civic Center, 1420 Miner St.
Marilyn Trost, deputy city clerk, Tuesday said residents may register today and Thursday from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 9 p.m.
After the city voter registration closes, residents may register through Sept. 27 at the Cook County Clerk's Office, 118 N. Clark St., Chicago, Room 402.
In addition to registration at city or county offices, there will be a special precinct registration day in Des Plaines Oct. 5. Residents may register at their local precincts from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m.
Anyone wishing to vote in the next election must be 18 years old, a citizen of the United States and a resident of their precinct for 30 days before the election.

FURTHER information on the new contract, Hamilton said, could only be released by Donald Peters, union president, who was out of town Wednesday.
Officials of the Lag Drug Co., a wholesale distributor of drugs, also were unavailable for comment Wednesday. The strike reportedly was the first in the company's history.
Most of the workers who took part in the strike are employed as order fillers and dock workers.
The employees went on strike Aug. 1 over what they called "the company's refusal to negotiate a decent contract."
Although there was disagreement on a number of issues, the primary stumbling block on contract negotiations was a provision requiring employees to work on Saturdays at the company's request.
About 30 to 35 administrative, security and office employees crossed picket lines during the strike, but union officials said the firm's operations were brought to a standstill during the walkout.

Most aldermen who oppose participation in the program say too many questions remain unanswered by the federal government. Many also oppose federal guidelines attached to the funds, saying they fear the program would lead to numerous low and moderate income housing projects in the city.
ALTHOUGH THE funds could not be used to build such projects, the federal government requires communities receiving the funds to file a housing assistance plan. The plan must show the community need for low and moderate income housing and propose a plan for meeting that need.
Bolek said he voted against applying for the funds while he was an alderman, and will continue to oppose city participation in the program.
"I don't think we should become involved in this because there are so many strings attached," he said. "Whenever you get involved with the federal government there are a lot of problems."
Michael Richardson, city director of planning and zoning, said if the city is to apply for 1978 funds, an application must be filed with the U.S. Dept. by Housing and Urban Development by Feb. 28, 1977.
He has asked the city council to make a decision on applying for the 1978 funds at its meeting Oct. 4 so that his department has time to prepare the application.
Bolek said although he does not believe the majority of the city council favors participation in the program, he has referred the matter to the health and welfare committee for study.

$10,000 OKd for seniors program

A $10,000 federal grant to develop an outreach program to assist senior citizens has been awarded to the Elk Grove-Schaumburg Townships Mental Health Center.
Jordan Rosen, center executive director, said he was notified of the approval Wednesday. The center had requested $12,000 but will be able to fund the program with the smaller amount, he said.

The center is interviewing for a full-time employee to provide counseling and information to senior citizens in the two townships.

In addition to counseling, the new employee would help the elderly learn to shop effectively or to be sure meals are delivered in the home if needed, Rosen said.

The grant can be renewed for two years. When federal funding ceases, the two townships and the center will have to fund the program.

Ford challenges Carter to 'earn' trust

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — President Ford officially opened his campaign against Jimmy Carter at his alma mater Wednesday, challenging the Democratic candidate head-on with "It is not enough for anyone to say 'trust me' — trust must be earned."
Ford came back to the University of Michigan where he was graduated 40 years ago and said he led the nation to "an incredible comeback" during his two years in the White House.
"The question in this campaign of 1976 is not, 'Who has the better vision of America?'" Ford said. "The question is, 'Who will act to make that vision a reality?'"
FORD'S SPEECH was his first outside Washington since winning the Republican nomination for election.

There were hecklers in the Michigan audience, but Ford got a one-minute standing ovation when he made his entrance with his wife.
Just as Ford was winding up his speech, a firecracker went off in the upper balcony of the Crisler Arena. Secret Service agents rushed to the spot. No one was injured.
Ford's speech was aimed at what White House aides say is Carter's greatest weakness — apparent indecisiveness and inconsistency. It said the American public deserves "specifics — not smiles, performance — not promises" from candidates.
"IT IS NOT enough for anyone to say 'Trust me.' Trust must be earned. Trust is not having to guess what a candidate means. Trust is leveling with the people before the election about what we're going to do after the election.

"Trust is not being all things to all people, but being the same thing to all people. Trust is not cleverly shading words so that each separate audience can hear what it wants to hear, but saying plainly and simply what you mean and meaning what you say."
In policy matters, Ford broke major

new ground only in the area of housing.
He said he would recommend changes in the Federal Housing Administration law "to reduce down payments on lower and middle priced housing, by up to 50 per cent."
He also said he would order the Housing and Urban Development Dept. to speed up a new federal guarantee program to lower monthly payments in early years of ownership and gradually increase them as family income rises.
ON OTHER MAJOR issues, Ford pledged to continue policies which he said were aimed at creating 2.5 million new jobs each year, holding down inflation, assuring all Americans "accessible and affordable" health care, producing "quality education," and foreign policies to keep the nation out of war.

Ford said he would fight unemployment "with an emphasis on our youth, especially the minorities," to produce "permanent jobs" in the private sector rather than "demeaning, dead-end jobs paid for out of the federal treasury."
Ford, hinting at some new future effort to help young Americans entering the job market, recalled the government has grants, loans and scholarships to help provide a college education.
"I believe we can apply this same principle to create a program for young people who choose not to go to college, but want a job at which they can learn a trade, a craft or practical business skills," he said.

Neighbors object

by JERRY THOMAS

Robert Jasch has been given the perplexing task of throwing away a boomerang.

Jasch keeps 11 pigeons at his home at 2605 Hawk Ln., Rolling Meadows. After a neighbor phoned in an anonymous complaint, police ordered Jasch to get rid of the birds.

"I don't know what to do," Jasch sobbed. "If I give my homing pigeons away, they will return. And then all I can do is kill them."

"IF I DON'T, they say they'll take me to court."

"I can't fight them, I can't hire lawyers, and I don't want to fight anybody anyhow," Jasch said.

Jasch appeared before the city council Tuesday to ask its help.

He failed that night to hide the marks of several sleepless nights, but his tears did not keep him from speaking.

"HELP ME and tell me how I can keep my birds. I don't want to kill them," Jasch pleaded.

He told a story of neighborhood harassment and asked the officials to explain why his birds were harmful.

"They don't fly around the neighborhood. I take good care of them," Jasch said.

To exercise his birds, Jasch takes them miles away from his home, releases them and races them home to the pen in his backyard.

Jasch has had 7 of the 11 birds for about six years and the other 4 the past three years.

"A PAIR were my Father's Day present from the kids," he said.

Jasch said he is not a defiant person and does not wish to battle the city.

"But, I don't understand what this is hurting. Is it good for them to ask me to kill my birds?" he asked.

Jasch 44, remembers a time 28 years ago when he was the proud owner of a flock of 100 homing pigeons. "I was drafted and no one else was able to care for the birds, and so my mother had them slaughtered," he said.

"I can't do that, not this time, it isn't right," Jasch said.

"I'LL DO ANYTHING else I can to keep the birds and I'd promise there would be no more. I couldn't keep them from breeding, but I could take away the eggs and substitute glass eggs."

"Then my birds will get disgusted and then maybe they will learn to accept it and maybe I could let them out less."

Jasch said he is going to try once more to convince city officials to let him keep his birds. If that fails, he hopes to find a new home for them. In rare cases, homing pigeons can be retrained, he said, "so maybe my birds will forget me."

Mayor Roland J. Meyer said he hopes the city's ordinance committee will find a solution.

"I'd hate to think that we have become so urbanized or callous as to take this action," he said.

City Police said Jasch was issued a warning ticket Sept. 11 notifying him he is in violation of a city ordinance that prohibits keeping pigeons.

"If Jasch does not dispose of the birds by about Sept. 25 we will cite him," Police Chief Lewis Case said. Jasch would then be forced to appear in Cook County Circuit Court on the matter.

If your company has been expanding, or you're thinking about moving, you'll certainly want to know about this modern system.

It offers convenience features that will help your people get things done faster.

$260,000 levy for ambulance OK'd by fire unit

The Wheeling Rural Fire Protection District Board Wednesday approved a $260,000 ambulance tax levy for 1977-78.

Lance Hooper, fire district trustee, said the levy will cost fire district residents an estimated 15 cents per $100 assessed valuation or $15 annually for homeowners with property valued at $10,000.

Officials probe legality of Selig as unit member

by LINDA PUNCH

Wheeling officials Wednesday attempted to determine whether Monday's appointment of David Selig to the village police and fire commission is legal.

Although Selig owns a local business, he is not registered to vote in Wheeling, according to village records. Selig, who owns a home at 2314 Thornwood Ave., Wilmette, maintains an apartment at 61 N. Milwaukee Ave., Wheeling. He is a registered voter of Wilmette, village officials there said.

Illinois law states that members of police and fire commissions "shall be considered officials of the municipality." State law requires that a municipal officer be "a qualified elector of the municipality."

VILLAGE PRES. Ted C. Scanlon Wednesday said Village Atty. John Burke is researching the commission's residency requirement. "There's going to be an attorney's interpretation on what an elector is," Scanlon said.

Selig said he told village officials about his dual residence during his interview for the commission position. "There were no games played. I told them I was concerned it might be a problem," he said.

Selig said he is in the process of selling his Wilmette home but has not

The maximum ambulance tax rate is 25 cents per $100 assessed valuation.

FUNDS FROM the ambulance tax, approved by voters in a July 17 referendum, will be used to pay for district paramedic and ambulance service. Fire district trustees asked for the tax because general revenue funds can be used only for firefighting purposes.

Hooper said he based the levy on the district's 1975 assessed valuation of $166,672,833. He said the $260,000 levy is "in the ball park" for meeting the paramedic needs of the Wheeling and Buffalo Grove fire departments.

Fire district trustees discussed the possibility of asking for a $300,000 levy or an estimated 18 cents per $100 assessed valuation, but decided the lower figure will be more appropriate for the first levy.

"We shouldn't go overboard this first year. We need to find out where we're at," Trustee James Winstead said.

ERWIN LEMKE, board president, said the levy will be submitted to Cook County officials for approval. He said the district probably will not receive funds from the ambulance tax until late 1977.

The district board also discussed a possible way of distributing the ambulance tax funds to the two departments based on the assessed valuation of the areas they serve.

Under the distribution plan, Wheeling would receive an estimated $173,163 and Buffalo Grove would get $86,836. Hooper said the proposed plan was "agreeable" to both departments.

Boat cruise planned

The Wheeling Park District family program will sponsor a boat cruise on Lake Geneva in Wisconsin from 9:30 a.m. to 2:45 p.m. Sept. 29.

The bus will leave Heritage Park, 222 S. Wolf Rd., at 9:30 a.m. and will return to the park at 2:45 p.m. The cost is $8.50 per person. The senior citizens fee is $8. The fee includes the cost of the boat trip, buffet lunch and transportation.

Registrations must be filed at Heritage Park by Sept. 21.

PINT-SIZED fisherman Kendra Pohn, 3, tries her luck at angling during the annual trout fishing derby sponsored by the Wheeling Park District. The derby continues through NORTRAN to operate buses here?

The Regional Transportation Authority is proposing several major changes to the Wheeling village bus system, including takeover of the system by the North Suburban Mass Transit District.

Steve Forsyth, an RTA spokesman, Wednesday said the RTA recommended NORTRAN takeover "because it's more economical to have large carriers rather than a lot of separate, small ones."

"Wheeling is already a member of NORTRAN, and NORTRAN has done what we consider an excellent job of Buffalo Grove bus service," Forsyth said.

IF NORTRAN assumes operation of the bus system, RTA funds would be placed directly in the NORTRAN budget rather than channeled through the village, Forsyth said.

"It will save the village a lot of time and trouble. They will be getting out of the bus business," he said.

The RTA proposal also includes restructuring of commuter service and midday bus service. Wheeling residents have complained that current bus routes are scheduled at inconvenient times.

In a letter to the village, RTA spokesman Edward L. Bailey said a study will be made to determine if commuters prefer bus service to the Northbrook or Mount Prospect railroad stations.

BAILEY SAID the RTA also will consider a midday route along Dundee Road from Milwaukee Avenue to Elmhurst Road. The midday bus might also provide service to Randhurst Shopping Center, the Chicago and Northwestern Ry. station in downtown Mount Prospect and Golf Mill Shopping Center, Niles.

The RTA also is considering a dial-a-bus system where residents could call village hall an hour before pick up and ask for transportation to a specific location in the village.

In a letter to RTA officials, Thomas Markus, assistant village manager, said he feels the proposed changes have "a great deal of merit."

"I feel that an organization such as NORTRAN, which is staffed with individuals who have expertise in the field of transportation, could make the Wheeling bus system economically feasible," he said.

The village bus system has been operating at a loss since it began more than three years ago, with an annual cost of about $45,000. The RTA has granted more than $35,000 to the village service to help it continue operation on a trial basis.

Forsyth said the proposal is in the "planning stages" and that village and RTA officials will meet to discuss details.

There were hecklers in the Michigan audience, but Ford got a one-minute standing ovation when he made his entrance with his wife.

Just as Ford was winding up his speech, a firecracker went off in the upper balcony of the Crisler Arena. Secret Service agents rushed to the spot. No one was injured.

Ford's speech was aimed at what White House aides say is Carter's greatest weakness — apparent indecisiveness and inconsistency. It said the American public deserves "specifics — not smiles, performance — not promises" from candidates.

"IT IS NOT enough for anyone to say 'Trust me.' Trust must be earned. Trust is not having to guess what a candidate means. Trust is leveling with the people before the election about what we're going to do after the election.

"Trust is not being all things to all people, but being the same thing to all people. Trust is not cleverly shading words so that each separate audience can hear what it wants to hear, but saying plainly and simply what you mean and meaning what you say."

In policy matters, Ford broke major

new ground only in the area of housing.

He said he would recommend changes in the Federal Housing Administration law "to reduce down payments on lower and middle priced housing, by up to 50 per cent."

He also said he would order the Housing and Urban Development Dept. to speed up a new federal guarantee program to lower monthly payments in early years of ownership and gradually increase them as family income rises.

ON OTHER MAJOR issues, Ford pledged to continue policies which he said were aimed at creating 2.5 million new jobs each year, holding down inflation, assuring all Americans "accessible and affordable" health care, producing "quality education," and foreign policies to keep the nation out of war.

Ford said he would fight unemployment "with an emphasis on our youth, especially the minorities," to produce "permanent jobs" in the private sector rather than "demeaning, dead-end jobs paid for out of the federal treasury."

Ford, hinting at some new future effort to help young Americans entering the job market, recalled the government has grants, loans and scholarships to help provide a college education.

"I believe we can apply this same principle to create a program for young people who choose not to go to college, but want a job at which they can learn a trade, a craft or practical business skills," he said.

Neighbors object

by JERRY THOMAS

Robert Jasch has been given the perplexing task of throwing away a boomerang.

Jasch keeps 11 pigeons at his home at 2605 Hawk Ln., Rolling Meadows. After a neighbor phoned in an anonymous complaint, police ordered Jasch to get rid of the birds.

"I don't know what to do," Jasch sobbed. "If I give my homing pigeons away, they will return. And then all I can do is kill them."

"If I DON'T, they say they'll take me to court."

"I can't fight them, I can't hire lawyers, and I don't want to fight anybody anyhow," Jasch said.

Jasch appeared before the city council Tuesday to ask its help.

He failed that night to hide the marks of several sleepless nights, but his tears did not keep him from speaking.

"HELP ME and tell me how I can keep my birds. I don't want to kill them," Jasch pleaded.

He told a story of neighborhood harassment and asked the officials to explain why his birds were harmful.

"They don't fly around the neighborhood. I take good care of them," Jasch said.

To exercise his birds, Jasch takes them miles away from his home, releases them and races them home to the pen in his backyard.

Jasch has had 7 of the 11 birds for about six years and the other 4 the past three years.

"A PAIR were my Father's Day present from the kids," he said.

Jasch said he is not a defiant person and does not wish to battle the city.

"But, I don't understand what this is hurting. Is it good for them to ask me to kill my birds?" he asked.

Jasch 44, remembers a time 26 years ago when he was the proud owner of a flock of 100 homing pigeons. "I was drafted and no one else was able to care for the birds, and so my mother had them slaughtered," he said.

"I can't do that, not this time, it isn't right," Jasch said.

"I'LL DO ANYTHING else I can to keep the birds and I'd promise there would be no more. I couldn't keep them from breeding, but I could take away the eggs and substitute glass eggs."

"Then my birds will get disgusted and then maybe they will learn to accept it and maybe I could let them out less."

Jasch said he is going to try once more to convince city officials to let him keep his birds. If that fails, he hopes to find a new home for them. In rare cases, homing pigeons can be retrained, he said, "so maybe my birds will forget me."

Mayor Roland J. Meyer said he hopes the city's ordinance committee will find a solution.

"I'd hate to think that we have become so urbanized or callous as to take this action," he said.

City Police said Jasch was issued a warning ticket Sept. 11 notifying him he is in violation of a city ordinance that prohibits keeping pigeons.

"If Jasch does not dispose of the birds by about Sept. 25 we will cite him," Police Chief Lewis Case said. Jasch would then be forced to appear in Cook County Circuit Court on the matter.

Legality of Selig position probed bought a new house elsewhere. "If we can find something in Wheeling, we will," he said.

Selig is co-owner of Hagerstrom Studios, 61 N. Milwaukee Ave., and maintains a law office at the same address. He said he decided to apply for a Wheeling commission "because I spend 90 per cent of my life here."

"I'm more concerned about what happens in Wheeling than Wilmette," he said.

SELIG ALSO said he and his wife, Mary, spend several nights a week at the Wheeling apartment. Mrs. Selig Monday was appointed to the Wheeling board of health, a position that does not require village residency.

Selig said he will fight to keep the commission position because "I'm very anxious to do it and I want to do it." He added that he doesn't want the appointment "shrouded in a lot of bitterness or impropriety."

Selig said he questions whether the state requirements for municipal officers apply to the commission position because "state law said commissioners shall be considered municipal officers, not that they are municipal officers."

He said he believes he is exempt from the residency requirement because the commission requires technical expertise. State law does not require municipal officers with technical expertise to live in the village. Selig, a former assistant state's attorney and former director of the Illinois Dangerous Drugs Commission, said his background gives him technical expertise.

APPOINTMENTS the village police and fire commission have been the center of controversy in recent months. Members of the village board in May were accused of being politically motivated when they failed to reappoint Vern Nystrom as commissioner.

Several trustees voting against the reappointment cited possible conflict of interest because Nystrom's wife, Donna, is a secretary for Wheeling Fire Chief Bernie Koepfen.

The fire and police commission controls the hiring, promotion, suspension and firing of police and fire department employees.

Little-used O'Hare bus service on the way out?

by NANCY GOTLER
Five days a week Mike Keroven drives an empty Continental Air Transport Co. bus down Northwest Highway to O'Hare Airport.

His employers say they can't afford to continue the service without modifying it. But, possibly because of pressure from Arlington Heights Village Pres. James T. Ryan, the company won't admit what Keroven and fellow driver Ed Rice say is inevitable: that the runs will be halted.

"We can't afford to keep it up now," Continental Vice Pres. John C. McCarthy said, "but I can't say that it definitely will be discontinued."

"We're planning on talking with (Northwest suburban) village officials next week and hope to look at readjustment of the schedule," he said. "Things like cutting back the number of runs a day, stepping up limousine service and a guaranteed ridership program are possibilities."

BUT SOME SAY those measures would even further discourage riders because buses will not be available when they are needed and residents will not patronize a service that might be temporary.

Taking a bus to the airport does have advantages. The one-way fare is $4.25, compared to approximately $11 for a cab and $15 for a limousine. And residents who drive to O'Hare will be assessed a $3.15-per-day parking fee.

The history of Continental's service to the Northwest suburbs has been controversial and erratic. In 1974 the route between the suburbs and the airport was discontinued because of low ridership and rising fuel costs.

Last year Ryan, angered at that decision, filed a complaint against Continental with the Illinois Commerce Commission in an attempt to force the company to either resume service or lose its rights to the route.

IN JUNE, Continental agreed to reinstate the route on a trial basis. But McCarthy said the experiment has been disappointing. The run averages 1.7 passengers per trip, far below his prediction of eight.

And bus driver Keroven said he picks up only one passenger a week during his 11 a.m. route from Arlington Park racetrack to the airport.

The buses, with a 29 passenger capacity, leave Arlington Park at 6, 7:20, 11 a.m. and 2 and 5:10 p.m. and the airport at 10:35 a.m., 1:35, 4:15 and 6:30 p.m. Only the 4:15 and 6:30 p.m. runs continue to Palatine and Barrington.

Buses leave Palatine from the Smith and Cofax station at 5:55, 7:10 a.m. and 5 p.m.

"The 120-day trial run was supposed to end the end of August," McCarthy said, "but because we wanted to have a few more figures after Labor Day, it's been extended until the end of September."

CONTINENTAL HAS a contract with the City of Chicago for ground transportation and must provide service "where there is a need," he said.

However, if it is determined there is no need for bus service between the Northwest suburbs and the airport, McCarthy said Continental could discontinue service without violating its charter.

Ryan is on vacation and unavailable for comment on Continental's current problem, but Palatine Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones said if service is halted area residents will not feel a transportation pinch.

"I don't know too many people who are taking the bus," he said, "because it's not as convenient for them. Many executives living in our area are on expenso accounts and just take a limousine."

HE SAID HE favors strengthening the Regional Transportation Authority service to the Northwest suburbs instead of weakened Continental service.

"Although I told Mr. Ryan at the time (of his complaint about Continental to ICC) that we would back his action," Jones said, "I would favor an RTA that functions."

"If Continental discontinued its service, it probably wouldn't affect the people here any more than if the RTA discontinued its service," he said. "The people in the Northwest suburbs are already paying for transportation service — the RTA — and not getting it."

Sun storms send TV viewers bad vibes

by PAUL GORES
What's causing those black, wavy lines on your television set when it's tuned to WBBM-TV, Channel 2? The answer is probably 93 million miles away.
Costation interference, or "venetian blinds" as TV repairmen call it, are the result of atmospheric conditions caused by storms on the sun.
One local television repairman said sun storms, which appear as spots on the sun's surface, give off a tremendous amount of energy which ionizes upper layers of the atmosphere and causes them to reflect TV signals normally lost to the atmosphere.

As a result, TV signals from stations as far as 1,000 miles away are reflected and picked up by low-channel receivers, such as Channel 2.
"SO WHAT YOU'RE really seeing is probably a station from Milwaukee or somewhere trying to come in on Channel 2," he said. "And there's nothing you can do about it." This type of interference occurs most as seasons change.
Several area residents have complained within the last two weeks about black, wavy lines on Channel 2. Citizens' Band radios or some other type of electrical source were suspected as the cause.

L. A. Pierce, director of the technical department for CBS in Chicago, agreed sun storms are probably the source of interference.
"It is characteristic of low frequencies such as Channel 2 to pick up signals from stations as far as 1,000 miles away," Pierce said.
Nothing can be done to eliminate or reduce interference caused by sun storms, Pierce said.

13-unit shopping center proposal
given to panel

Plans for a 13-store professional office and retail shopping center on the southwest corner of Dundee and Old Buffalo Grove roads were presented Wednesday night to the Buffalo Grove Plan Commission.
Thomas Strey, of Koenig and Strey Investment Properties, Inc., Glenview, said the center would contain two single-story buildings forming an "L" facing the intersection.
Strey described the proposed architecture as "country-French." He said the front parking lot would accommodate about 70 cars.
The plan commission asked Strey to revise plans to include sidewalks along Dundee and Old Buffalo Grove roads, to modify parking patterns to include loading and garbage pickup areas behind stores and to review drainage and retention patterns on the site.

THE SHOPPING center would contain a barber shop, dentist and doctor offices, a sports shop, a drapery store and a jewelry store.
He said there is commitment now for occupancy of two units, including one by the Koenig and Strey firm. He said 5,000 square feet of the 20,000 square foot center is already rented.
Although Strey said planners are trying to avoid a strip-style center, Commr. Mel Kandel called the proposed center, "semi-strip."
Strey said some storefronts will be set back from the walkway. Pillars also will be constructed along the walkway to avoid a strip appearance, he said.
"To us, strip-store is a dirty word," he said. "The kind of people that would move into a strip-store are not the kind of people we are seeking."

PLAN COMMISSION Chairman Carl Genrich said he thought the village would prefer a medical or office building site.
Strey said an office building financially is "one of the riskiest things" a developer can build.
The proposed center would be constructed of white brick and flagstone. Neon-light store signs would be above a lighted walkway.

BEAMS CRISSCROSS the sky to form the ceiling of a Kohl's Supermarket under construction at the southeast corner of Dundee and Buffalo Grove roads, Buffalo Grove. The store will be part of a five-to seven-store shopping center set to open in November.

7.5% pay hike for top aides
in Dist. 96 OKd

Top administrators in Buffalo Grove-Lake Grove Dist. 96 will receive salary increases this year averaging 7.5 per cent with the exception of Supt. William Hitzeman, who will not receive a monetary increase.
The Dist. 96 Board of Education in a 4 to 3 vote approved pay raises for the district's principals, assistant principal and business manager.
The salaries of Twin Groves Principal Larry Shafer and Assistant Principal Natalie Ann Czuba were increased from $18,600 to $20,000, Willow Groves Principal Kent Rich received a $1,500 pay hike, increasing his salary from $22,000 to $23,500. Business Mgr. Frances Alton's salary increased from $20,000 to $21,500.
HITZEMAN DID not receive a pay increase for 1976-77. His salary will remain $32,300. The board decided, however, to assume the $418 cost of Hitzeman's dependent insurance coverage.
Board Pres. William Kroll said the $260,000 ambulance tax levy OKd

The Wheeling Rural Fire Protection District Board Wednesday approved a $260,000 ambulance tax levy for 1977-78.
Lance Hooper, fire district trustee, said the levy will cost fire district residents an estimated 15 cents per $100 assessed valuation or $15 annually for homeowners with property valued at $10,000.
The maximum ambulance tax rate is 25 cents per $100 assessed valuation.
FUNDS FROM the ambulance tax, approved by voters in a July 17 referendum, will be used to pay for district paramedic and ambulance service. Fire district trustees asked for the tax because general revenue funds can be used only for firefighting purposes.

Hooper said he based the levy on the district's 1975 assessed valuation of $168,672,853. He said the $250,000 levy is "in the ball park" for meeting the paramedic needs of the Wheeling and Buffalo Grove fire departments.
Fire district trustees discussed the possibility of asking for a $300,000 levy or an estimated 18 cents per $100 assessed valuation, but decided the lower figure will be more appropriate for the first levy.
"We shouldn't go overboard this first year. We need to find out where we're at," Trustee James Winstead said.
ERWIN LEMKE, board president, said the levy will be submitted to Cook County officials for approval. He said the district probably will not receive funds from the ambulance tax until late 1977.
The district board also discussed a possible way of distributing the ambulance tax funds to the two departments based on the assessed valuation of the areas they serve.

Weight-lifting wing slated for Dist. 214

An addition to house facilities for weight-lifting at Wheeling High School will be built through a cooperative arrangement between High School Dist. 214 and the Wheeling Spur Club.
The addition, which will adjoin the fieldhouse, will house weight-lifting and some gymnastics equipment. The athletic booster club estimated the addition will cost about $26,000.

The board approved funding one-third of the addition's cost through district funds with the booster club funding two-thirds of the cost.
A similar financial arrangement was made with the booster club at Hershey High School in Arlington Heights in June to build a balcony platform to house the weight-lifting equipment.
The board set a limit of $9,000 in district funds for the Wheeling project.

Ford challenges Carter to 'earn' trust

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — President Ford officially opened his campaign against Jimmy Carter at his alma mater Wednesday, challenging the Democratic candidate head-on with "It is not enough for anyone to say 'trust me' — trust must be earned."
Ford came back to the University of Michigan where he was graduated 40 years ago and said he led the nation to "an incredible comeback" during his two years in the White House.
"The question in this campaign of 1976 is not, 'Who has the better vision of America?'" Ford said. "The question is, 'Who will act to make that vision a reality?'"
FORD'S SPEECH was his first outside Washington since winning the Republican nomination for election.

There were hecklers in the Michigan audience, but Ford got a one-minute standing ovation when he made his entrance with his wife.
Just as Ford was winding up his speech, a firecracker went off in the upper balcony of the Crisler Arena. Secret Service agents rushed to the spot. No one was injured.
Ford's speech was aimed at what White House aides say is Carter's greatest weakness — apparent indecisiveness and inconsistency. It said the American public deserves "specifics — not smiles, performance — not promises" from candidates.
"IT IS NOT enough for anyone to say 'Trust me.' Trust must be earned. Trust is not having to guess what a candidate means. Trust is leveling with the people before the election about what we're going to do after the election.

Mondale reaction

"Trust is not being all things to all people, but being the same thing to all people. Trust is not cleverly shading words so that each separate audience can hear what it wants to hear, but saying plainly and simply what you mean and meaning what you say."
In policy matters, Ford broke major

new ground only in the area of housing.
He said he would recommend changes in the Federal Housing Administration law "to reduce down payments on lower and middle priced housing, by up to 50 per cent."
He also said he would order the Housing and Urban Development Dept. to speed up a new federal guarantee program to lower monthly payments in early years of ownership and gradually increase them as family income rises.
ON OTHER MAJOR issues, Ford pledged to continue policies which he said were aimed at creating 2.5 million new jobs each year, holding down inflation, assuring all Americans "accessible and affordable" health care, producing "quality education," and foreign policies to keep the nation out of war.

Ford said he would fight unemployment "with an emphasis on our youth, especially the minorities," to produce "permanent jobs" in the private sector rather than "demeaning, dead-end jobs paid for out of the federal treasury."
Ford, hinting at some new future effort to help young Americans entering the job market, recalled the government has grants, loans and scholarships to help provide a college education.
"I believe we can apply this same principle to create a program for young people who choose not to go to college, but want a job at which they can learn a trade, a craft or practical business skills," he said.

Dist. 96 reinstates 2 school jobs

The positions of assistant principal at Twin Groves School and nurse for Buffalo Grove-Long Grove Dist. 96 have been reinstated by the board of education.

Both positions originally were eliminated for this school year when the board made budget cuts last winter. Supt. William Hitzeman said the positions were restored because the district's financial picture appears better than it did earlier this year.

The board reestablished the assistant principal position with the condition that if the person serving as assistant principal is asked to be principal at Kildeer School when it opens, the district will not fill the Twin Groves position for the remainder of this school year. The board projects a January opening for Kildeer.

After reinstating the assistant prior principal position the board rehired Natalie Ann Czuba for the job. Miss Czuba served as Twin Groves assistant principal last year and returned to a teaching position when the administrative job was cut.

The board voted 5 to 2 to restore a position for one nurse in the district. Dist. 96 formerly employed two nurses.

Board Pres. William Kroll and member Michael Cahill voted against the reinstatement of the nursing position after the board members discussed whether a registered nurse could provide better health care than a health aide, without a physician's aid.

The board rehired Grace Lee as nurse after the position was reinstated. Mrs. Lee served as Dist. 96 school nurse for the past 10 years.

Dist. 96 approves teachers' pay pact

The Buffalo Grove-Long Grove Dist. 96 Board of Education has ratified a 1976-77 teachers' contract which calls for an over-all 7 per cent salary increase.

The board unanimously approved the contract Monday. Teachers rallied the salary settlement last Thursday, voting by a 4-to-1 margin in favor of the new contract.

This year's contract raises pay for a beginning teacher with no experience from $9,200 to $9,500. Salaries for teachers at the top of the salary schedule increased from $15,907 to $16,543.

additional insurance benefit for Hiltzman is nontaxable income and amounts to an additional $600 in spending power.

"Mr. Hiltzman's salary has gone up about 45 per cent in the past few years," Kroll said. "He is probably in line with other superintendents in like districts with like enrollments."

Kroll, who voted against the administrative salary recommendations along with board members Howard Falk and Louis Lundstedt, said he opposed the raises because the board did not use a "firm salary range schedule in coordination with merit increases" in granting the pay raises.

Kroll asked the board finance committee to study administrative salaries and establish a base salary and standard ranges.

Jasch wants his birds, not a fight

by JERRY THOMAS

Robert Jasch has been given the perplexing task of throwing away a boomerang.

Jasch keeps 11 pigeons at his home at 2605 Hawk Ln., Rolling Meadows. After a neighbor phoned in an anonymous complaint, police ordered Jasch to get rid of the birds.

"I don't know what to do," Jasch sobbed. "If I give my homing pigeons away, they will return. And then all I can do is kill them."

"If I DON'T, they say they'll take me to court."

"I can't fight them, I can't hire lawyers, and I don't want to fight anybody anyhow," Jasch said.

Jasch appeared before the city council Tuesday to ask its help.

He failed that night to hide the marks of several sleepless nights, but his tears did not keep him from speaking.

"HELP ME and tell me how I can keep my birds. I don't want to kill them," Jasch pleaded.

He told a story of neighborhood harassment and asked the officials to explain why his birds were harmful.

"They don't fly around the neighborhood. I take good care of them," Jasch said.

To exercise his birds, Jasch takes them miles away from his home, releases them and races them home to the pen in his backyard.

Jasch has had 7 of the 11 birds for about six years and the other 4 the past three years.

"A PAINT were my Father's Day present from the kids," he said.

Jasch said he is not a defiant person and does not wish to battle the city.

"But, I don't understand what this is hurting. Is it good for them to ask me to kill my birds?" he asked.

Jasch 44, remembers a time 28 years ago when he was the proud owner of a flock of 100 homing pigeons. "I was drafted and no one else was able to care for the birds, and so my mother had them slaughtered," he said.

"I can't do that, not this time, it isn't right," Jasch said.

"I'll DO ANYTHING else I can to keep the birds and I'd promise there would be no more. I couldn't keep them from breeding, but I could take away the eggs and substitute glass eggs."

"Then my birds will get disgusted and then maybe they will learn to accept it and maybe I could let them out less."

Jasch said he is going to try once more to convince city officials to let him keep his birds. If that fails, he hopes to find a new home for them. In rare cases, homing pigeons can be retrained, he said, "so maybe my birds will forget me."

Mayor Roland J. Meyer said he hopes the city's ordinance committee will find a solution.

"I'd hate to think that we have become so urbanized or callous as to take this action," he said.

City Police said Jasch was issued a warning ticket Sept. 11 notifying him he is in violation of a city ordinance that prohibits keeping pigeons.

"If Jasch does not dispose of the birds by about Sept. 25 we will cite him," Police Chief Lewis Case said. Jasch would then be forced to appear in Cook County Circuit Court on the matter.

by PAUL GORES
What's causing those black, wavy lines on your television set when it's tuned to WBBM-TV, Channel 2? The answer is probably 93 million miles away.
Costation interference, or "venetian blinds" as TV repairmen call it, are the result of atmospheric conditions caused by storms on the sun.
One local television repairman said sun storms, which appear as spots on the sun's surface, give off a tremendous amount of energy which ionizes upper layers of the atmosphere and causes them to reflect TV signals normally lost to the atmosphere.

As a result, TV signals from stations as far as 1,000 miles away are reflected and picked up by low-channel receivers, such as Channel 2.
"SO WHAT YOU'RE really seeing is probably a station from Milwaukee or somewhere trying to come in on Channel 2," he said. "And there's nothing you can do about it." This type of interference occurs most as seasons change.
Several area residents have complained within the last two weeks about black, wavy lines on Channel 2. Citizens' Band radios or some other type of electrical source were suspected as the cause.

L. A. Pierce, director of the technical department for CBS in Chicago, agreed sun storms are probably the source of interference.
"It is characteristic of low frequencies such as Channel 2 to pick up signals from stations as far as 1,000 miles away," Pierce said.
Nothing can be done to eliminate or reduce interference caused by sun storms, Pierce said.

Village and mall OKd pinballs: store owner

The owner of a Grove Mall Shopping Center record shop said Wednesday that he installed 20 pinball machines on the strength of verbal agreements with the mall management and village officials.
Angered by the youths who loiter near the store, village officials say the arcade in One Octave Higher violates its own lease with the mall as well as the village's zoning ordinances.
But owner Frank Schlinkhoff said he and his father checked with the village and mall manager before they spent $30,000 for the pinball machines.

"IT IS NOT IN our lease that we can have the games, but we had verbal approval from Robert Cagaan, then the manager of the mall, and we went to the village for the machine licenses before we installed the machines," Schlinkhoff said.
Village Atty. George B. Knickerbocker has said the licenses for the machines were "issued incorrectly" because the store is in a zoning district where amusement centers are not allowed.
Schlinkhoff said the village's proposed amusement center licensing ordinance is "ridiculous."
"They (village officials) say they are not aiming it at any one business, but here we are next to an ice cream parlor," he said, referring to the section of the ordinance which would prohibit an amusement center from being within 300 feet of a carry-out restaurant, drive-in restaurant, candy or ice cream store, liquor store, drug store or theater.

KNICKERBOCKER said that section of the ordinance was written on the advice of an outside planner, who was unfamiliar with One Octave Higher, and was aimed at separating crowd-generating businesses.
Schlinkhoff said he approved of the anti-loitering law passed Tuesday by the village board.
"We've tried for a long time to get something on loitering passed ourselves," he said. "We try to do everything we can to keep things in line out here."
Schlinkhoff was one of several mall businessmen who hired off-duty policemen as added security and crowd control, but he said it got too expensive for the businessmen. He said most of the troublemakers in the mall are not his customers because they are not allowed in the record store.

Schlinkhoff said he doubted he'd be able to maintain a viable business if the machines were removed from his store. The current machines have been there since July 1975.

Sprinkling ban relaxed, but warning issued

Elk Grove Village property owners Saturday will be able to water their lawns for the first time since June, but village officials warn they'll ban sprinkling again if there is a drop in water pressure.
"We're taking a calculated risk," said Village Pres. Charles J. Zettek.
Lawn sprinkling will be permitted between 11 a.m. and 4 p.m. each Saturday, starting this week, as long as no severe water pressure problems develop.
TRUSTEE EDWARD W. Kenna Jr. said the board's action in easing the ban was made despite a village staff recommendation to continue the ban. He said the staff is concerned because of problems with the only deep well west of Ill. Rte. 53.

The well, 992 W. Glenn Tr., was shut down Friday. The only other well serving the area is a shallow one temporarily hooked up to the water system.
According to Administrative Assistant Gary E. Parrin, the deep well's production dropped from 1,000 to 520 gallons per minute when sand caved in underground. He said the well was shut down "to avoid further deterioration."
Repair work on the well will not start until the weather cools so that the well can be used in cases of emergency.
The village has been able to maintain adequate water pressure west of Ill. Rte. 53 by filling its westside reservoir at night, using pumps to bring water from east of Ill. Rte. 53. The filled reservoir has provided adequate water for daytime hours.

Ford challenges Carter to 'earn' trust

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — President Ford officially opened his campaign against Jimmy Carter at his alma mater Wednesday, challenging the Democratic candidate head-on with "an incredible comeback" during his two years in the White House.
"The question in this campaign of 1976 is not, 'Who has the better vision of America?'" Ford said. "The question is, 'Who will act to make that vision a reality?'"
FORD'S SPEECH was his first outside Washington since winning the Republican nomination for election.

There were hecklers in the Michigan audience, but Ford got a one-minute standing ovation when he made his entrance with his wife.
Just as Ford was winding up his speech, a firecracker went off in the upper balcony of the Crisler Arena. Secret Service agents rushed to the spot. No one was injured.
Ford's speech was aimed at what White House aides say is Carter's greatest weakness — apparent indecisiveness and inconsistency. It said the American public deserves "specifics — not smiles, performance — not promises" from candidates.
"IT IS NOT enough for anyone to say 'Trust me.' Trust must be earned. Trust is not having to guess what a candidate means. Trust is leveling with the people before the election about what we're going to do after the election.

"Trust is not being all things to all people, but being the same thing to all people. Trust is not cleverly shading words so that each separate audience can hear what it wants to hear, but saying plainly and simply what you mean and meaning what you say."
In policy matters, Ford broke major

new ground only in the area of housing.
He said he would recommend changes in the Federal Housing Administration law "to reduce down payments on lower and middle priced housing, by up to 50 per cent."
He also said he would order the Housing and Urban Development Dept. to speed up a new federal guarantee program to lower monthly payments in early years of ownership and gradually increase them as family income rises.
ON OTHER MAJOR issues, Ford pledged to continue policies which he said were aimed at creating 2.5 million new jobs each year, holding down inflation, assuring all Americans "accessible and affordable" health care, producing "quality education," and foreign policies to keep the nation out of war.

Ford said he would fight unemployment "with an emphasis on our youth, especially the minorities," to produce "permanent jobs" in the private sector rather than "demeaning, dead-end jobs paid for out of the federal treasury."
Ford, hinting at some new future effort to help young Americans entering the job market, recalled the government has grants, loans and scholarships to help provide a college education.
"I believe we can apply this same principle to create a program for young people who choose not to go to college, but want a job at which they can learn a trade, a craft or practical business skills," he said.

Detective commended for service

An Elk Grove Village detective received a gold medal commendation for distinguished service Wednesday at the Chicago Assn. of Commerce and Industry seminar on "Business and Industry - Targets of Crime" in Chicago.

Clarence M. Kelley, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and Police Chief Harry Jenkins of Elk Grove Village presented the award to Det. Raymond J. Rose for his investigative work in 1975 and 1976.

Jenkins, in introducing Rose to a luncheon at which Kelley was the keynote speaker at the Pick-Congress Hotel in Chicago, cited Rose for:

• His handling of the Columbo family triple homicide case in May 1976, which culminated in the indictments and arrests of Patricia Columbo, daughter of the family, and her boyfriend, Frank DeLuca.

• His performance in December 1975 at the scene of an armed robbery in the village in which three persons were arrested.

• His infiltration and exposure of interstate narcotics and theft rings in late 1975 and early 1976.

Rose was cited for outstanding performance in local law enforcement. Bronze, silver and gold medals also were awarded by the association for local and federal law enforcement.

ROBERT JASCH doesn't want to kill his birds, but he may be forced to if he cannot retrain the homing pigeons he has raised at his home in Rolling Meadows. The city has given him about two weeks to get rid of the birds, which violate city ordinance.

more to convince city officials to let him keep his birds. If that fails, he hopes to find a new home for them. In rare cases, homing pigeons can be retrained, he said, "so maybe my birds will forget me."

Mayor Roland J. Meyer said he hopes the city's ordinance committee will find a solution. "I'd hate to think that we have become so urbanized or callous as to take this action," he said.

City Police said Jasch was issued a warning ticket Sept. 11 notifying him he is in violation of a city ordinance that prohibits keeping pigeons.

"If Jasch does not dispose of the birds by about Sept. 25 we will cite him," Police Chief Lewis Case said. Jasch would then be forced to appear in Cook County Circuit Court on the matter.

Village board wrapup

Traffic lights OKd at Higgins, Lively

The Elk Grove Village Board Tuesday awarded five contracts, including one for $43,277.70 to have traffic signals installed at the intersection of Higgins Road and Lively Boulevard.

The contract was given to H. H. Electric Co., River Grove, the lowest of two bidders. The work is to be completed within eight weeks.

The normal two-thirds state funding for the project is unavailable, leaving the village with the full cost. The vote was unanimous. Two previous opponents of the expenditure, Trustees Theodore J. Stoddler and George T. Specs, were absent.

The other contracts were: $8,000.00 to Elgin Chrysler-Plymouth Inc., Elgin, the low bidder, for two four-door sedans to be used by the fire department. Two 1970 Chevrolets will be traded in.

$1,800.22 to Lewis International Inc., Wheeling, the low bidder, for a riding lawn mower with snow blade.

$1,617 to Warning Lites of Illinois, Addison, the low bidder, for 60 street barricades to be used by the water and street departments.

$44,882 to Cass Ford Inc., Des Plaines, the low bidder, for two dump trucks equipped with salt spreaders and reversible snow plows.

Mutual aid agreement OKd

The village's public works department was authorized to participate in the Northwest Municipal Conference's mutual aid programs through which both equipment and manpower will be shared during a disaster or other time of need.

Participation in the plans has been approved by Mount Prospect, Barrington, Palatine and Arlington Heights, officials said.

Fire lanes approved

Fire lanes have been established on Burgundy, Dauphine and Bordeaux courts and Versailles Circle. Police will begin ticketing vehicles parked within the designated fire lanes.

Cleanup contract OKd

The village has renewed its contract with Chicagoland Sales & Service for housekeeping services at the village hall, 901 Wellington Ave. The monthly charge will continue to be $1,750.

3 appointed to committee

Trustees Ronald L. Chierneck, Edward W. Kenna Jr. and Michael J. Tosto were appointed as a committee to work with the Elk Grove Estates Homeowners' Assn. The association members say they are paying double for services like snow removal and street maintenance and are asking the village to assume ownership of the private streets.

2 police officers honored

Elk Grove Village police Detectives John Landers and Raymond J. Rose were commended for their investigative work on the Columbo homicide case. In addition, Rose was commended for his work in breaking up a three-state drug traffic ring and an interstate theft ring.

Stoddler gives 2 gallons of blood

The village also honored blood donors and five-year employees. One gallon blood donor awards will go to Alvin Golemo, Irwin Helford, Raymond Haar, Peter McAlpine, E. Stanley Klyber, Herbert Fink, Francis J. Detormann, Phyllis Morrenzin and Jerry Wehmhoefer.

Village Trustee Theodore J. Stoddler is the village's first donor of two gallons.

The employees honored were building inspector Joseph Gamache, water department equipment operator Joseph Gargano, street department auto mechanic Lauren Hicks and street department maintenance man George Palmer.

Little-used O'Hare bus on its way to extinction

by NANCY GOTLER

Five days a week Mike Kereven drives an empty Continental Air Transport Co. bus down Northwest Highway to O'Hare Airport.

His employers say they can't afford to continue the service without modifying it. But, possibly because of pressure from Arlington Heights Village Pres. James T. Ryan, the company won't admit what Kereven and fellow driver Ed Rice say is inevitable: that the runs will be halted.

"We can't afford to keep it up now," Continental Vice Pres. John C. McCarthy said, "but I can't say that it definitely will be discontinued."

"We're planning on talking with (Northwest suburban) village officials next week and hope to look at readjustment of the schedule," he said. "Things like cutting back the number of runs a day, stepping up limousine service and a guaranteed ridership program are possibilities."

BUT SOME SAY those measures would even further discourage riders because buses will not be available when they are needed and residents will not patronize a service that might be temporary.

Taking a bus to the airport does have advantages. The one-way fare is $4.25, compared to approximately $11 for a cab and $15 for a limousine. And residents who drive to O'Hare will be assessed a $3.15-per-day parking fee.

The history of Continental's service to the Northwest suburbs has been controversial and erratic. In 1974 the route between the suburbs and the airport was discontinued because of low ridership and rising fuel costs.

Last year Ryan, angered at that decision, filed a complaint against Continental with the Illinois Commerce Commission in an attempt to force the company to either resume service or lose its rights to the route.

IN JUNE, Continental agreed to reinstate the route on a trial basis. But McCarthy said the experiment has been disappointing. The run averages 1.7 passengers per trip, far below his prediction of eight.

And bus driver Kereven said he picks up only one passenger a week during his 11 a.m. route from Arlington Park racetrack to the airport.

The buses, with a 29 passenger capacity, leave Arlington Park at 6:20, 11 a.m. and 2 and 5:10 p.m. and the airport at 10:35 a.m., 1:35, 4:15 and 6:30 p.m. Only the 4:15 and 6:30 p.m. runs continue to Palatine and Barrington.

Buses leave Palatine from the Smith and Colfax station at 5:55, 7:10 a.m. and 5 p.m.

"The 120-day trial run was supposed to end the end of August," McCarthy said, "but because we wanted to have a few more figures after Labor Day, it's been extended until the end of September."

CONTINENTAL HAS a contract with the City of Chicago for ground transportation and must provide service "where there is a need," he said.

However, if it is determined there is no need for bus service between the Northwest suburbs and the airport, McCarthy said Continental could discontinue service without violating its charter.

Ryan is on vacation and unavailable for comment on Continental's current problem, but Palatine Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones said if service is halted area residents will not feel a transportation pinch.

"I don't know too many people who are taking the bus," he said, "because it's not as convenient for them. Many executives living in our area are on expense accounts and just take a limousine."

HE SAID HE favors strengthening the Regional Transportation Authority service to the Northwest suburbs instead of weakened Continental service.

"Although I told Mr. Ryan at the time of his complaint about Continental to (JCC) that we would back his action," Jones said, "I would favor an RTA that functions."

"If Continental discontinued its service, it probably wouldn't affect the people here any more than if the RTA discontinued its service," he said. "The people in the Northwest suburbs are already paying for transportation service — the RTA — and not getting it."

Meanwhile, McCarthy is planning how to cope with the problem. "People are used to door-to-door service and have come to expect it. It's going to be a matter of time and re-education. People are just going to have to be educated toward mass transportation."

$10,000 OKd for seniors program

A $10,000 federal grant to develop an outreach program to assist senior citizens has been awarded to the Elk Grove-Schaumburg Townships Mental Health Center.

Jordan Rosen, center executive director, said he was notified of the approval Wednesday. The center had requested $12,000 but will be able to fund the program with the smaller amount, he said.

The center is interviewing for a full-time employee to provide counseling and information to senior citizens in the two townships.

In addition to counseling, the new employee would help the elderly learn to shop effectively or to be sure meals are delivered in the home if needed, Rosen said.

The grant can be renewed for two years. When federal funding ceases, the two townships and the center will have to fund the program.

Inverness seeks nail-tossing culprit

Inverness' elusive troublemaker, the nail thrower, is still at it after nine years.

But the Inverness Village Board has made it a special project to find out who keeps throwing nails across Baldwin Road near Inverway Road. Villago Pres. Russell V. Puzey has asked Betsy Passarelli, chairman of the police committee, to make a special effort to identify the culprit within the next two months.

Village Clerk Sandy Johnson said the nail throwing "happens very frequently." She said there have been 6 to 10 complaints about it during the past two months.

HUNDREDS OF rusty nails line Baldwin Road at the spot the thrower seems to like best. The nails, usually new and ranging from roof to finishing nails, are thrown most frequently before a weekend or holiday when the road would be heavily traveled, according to reports and complaints from residents.

Either Cook County Sheriff's police or Mrs. Johnson sweep the nails off the road when a complaint is called in.

Despite the special effort to identify the nail thrower, Barrington Police Chief Howard Peek said he doesn't know what else can be done.

"We've tried surveillance," Peek said, "but it's rather intermittent. I've even sat out there personally."

Mrs. Passarelli said anyone who sees a person throwing nails across the road or has helpful information should get in touch with the Barrington police immediately at 381-2141.

Residents receive college degrees

Elk Grove Village students receiving degrees at summer quarter commencement include: Carol Smitherman earned a bachelor of arts degree in education at Louisiana Tech University... the University of Illinois-Champaign conferred a master of science degree to Heidi C. Fron... Corrine Reeder was graduated from St. Mary of Nazareth Hospital Center School of Medical Technology.

Robert M. DeHaven, a graduate student in the University of Illinois-Champaign architecture department has won a third prize of $1,000 awarded in international competition administered by the National Institute for Architectural Education... Melra K. McCormick and Kenneth L. Pollitz, both sophomores, have been named to the honor roll at the University of Missouri-Columbia.

Christine Ann Burg has been selected to assist as hostess for new student orientation at Bob Jones University... Armin Baltis has begun two semesters of undergraduate study in Austria offered by the University of Illinois-Champaign.

Until 2 new wells ready: Willis

Manager warns against occupying new buildings

Elk Grove Village should continue to delay all new construction, unless the new buildings remain vacant until two new wells are completed next summer, said Village Mgr. Charles A. Willis.

"Construction, preparation, something short of occupancy could take place depending on the scheduling," Willis said Wednesday.

The village has approved no annexations or rezonings since a moratorium was imposed last July. The moratorium has expired, but the board has not been asked by any developer to consider annexation or rezoning. One annexation request, by Ted Szywala, was made just before the moratorium.

Willis said he believes occupancy of such new construction would be allowed once the village builds a 12th well.

THE VILLAGE HAS 10 wells, with one more under construction. A report by consulting engineers Greeley and Hansen said the 11th well should be completed by May 1, 1977, and a 12th well could be operational by early July. The two wells will be in the area west of Ill. Rte. 53.

The village board Tuesday authorized Willis to negotiate a contract for construction of the 12th well because Willis told the board that seeking bids would delay the project 45 to 60 days. The board said it wants the well in service next summer.

The fate of the Szywala and Alliance Service Corp. petition for annexation and zoning for 276 single-family homes remains uncertain.

The village board must act on the request. At a public hearing two months ago, Szywala said he would not need occupancy permits until next September.

The village board will resume its discussion at 8 p.m. Sept. 23, during a continuation of this week's village board meeting.

FCC officials to talk at CB meeting

The Communicators is a Citizens' Band radio club with members in Schaumburg, Hoffman Estates, Palatine, Arlington Heights, Elk Grove Village, Rolling Meadows, Medinah, Roselle, Streamwood, Hanover Park and Elgin. Membership in the group totals about 340.

Van Doorn, known as the "Uncle Charlie" in CB slang, will be available after the speech to answer questions.

by PAUL GORES
What's causing those black, wavy lines on your television set when it's tuned to WBBM-TV, Channel 2? The answer is probably 93 million miles away.
Costation interference, or "venetian blinds" as TV repairmen call it, are the result of atmospheric conditions caused by storms on the sun.
One local television repairman said sun storms, which appear as spots on the sun's surface, give off a tremendous amount of energy which ionizes upper layers of the atmosphere and causes them to reflect TV signals normally lost to the atmosphere.

As a result, TV signals from stations as far as 1,000 miles away are reflected and picked up by low-channel receivers, such as Channel 2.
"SO WHAT YOU'RE really seeing is probably a station from Milwaukee or somewhere trying to come in on Channel 2," he said. "And there's nothing you can do about it." This type of interference occurs most as seasons change.
Several area residents have complained within the last two weeks about black, wavy lines on Channel 2. Citizens' Band radios or some other type of electrical source were suspected as the cause.

L. A. Pierce, director of the technical department for CBS in Chicago, agreed sun storms are probably the source of interference.
"It is characteristic of low frequencies such as Channel 2 to pick up signals from stations as far as 1,000 miles away," Pierce said.
Nothing can be done to eliminate or reduce interference caused by sun storms, Pierce said.

Court decision asked in license suspension case

Schaumburg officials will ask the Illinois Appellate Court to rule on village attempts to reinstate a 20-day liquor license suspension for a village nightclub.

Schaumburg trustees supported Village Pres. Raymond Kessell's decision to appeal a Cook County Circuit Court ruling that upheld the Illinois Liquor Control Commission's decision to reduce the license suspension for B'Ginnings Ltd. from 20 days to three.

Kessell had ordered the 20-day suspension after witnesses at a hearing, one of them an off-duty policeman, said they were beaten by employees at the club, 1227 E. Golf Rd. He also said he heard private testimony that employees made "sexual advances" toward a young girl.

WHEN HE UPHHELD the state commission's ruling, Judge Arthur Dunne said he agreed with Kessell's decision and even found the 20-day suspension "lenient." But he said he had no legal authority to overrule the state agency.

Kessell said it is "absolutely ridiculous to have a village liquor commissioner if his authority is overruled not only by the state commission but also by the circuit court."

"Apparently the only unquestionable duty of a local liquor commissioner is to issue licenses," he said.

Kessell said he believes the B'Ginnings case must be pursued "in the interest of defining and supporting the concept of local control."

VILLAGE ATTY. Erwin Jentsch said Dunne told him the state liquor commission's decision "is an area that begs for interpretation by a reviewing court."

"I definitely think that this is sufficiently important for the village to proceed with an appeal, and I think we have an excellent case," Jentsch said.

A spokesman for the state liquor commission said the suspension was reduced because only two of the persons who said they were beaten filed criminal assault charges and both cases were dismissed when the plaintiffs failed to appear in court.

The spokesman said the commission's responsibility is "to see that uniform penalties are meted out throughout the state."

John and Amy Greno moved to Hoffman Estates from Chicago three months ago to get away from the high crime area where they lived.

They thought the suburbs would be a nice place to raise their two children, Mark, 4, and Laura, 5.

That was before bullets began ringing through their apartment at 216 Grand Canyon Pkwy. Wednesday night.

"I was watching 'Starsky and Hutch' when I heard what I thought was a lot of pounding on the walls," John, 23, said. "Then after three or four shots, I knew bullets were coming through the wall. I shouted to Amy to stay (in the bedroom) with the kids. I hit the floor."

ONE BULLET went through the kitchen wall, bounded off the ceiling and hit the living room curtain rod. Others were imbedded in a kitchen cabinet. Another put a sizable dent in a steel filing cabinet. The apartment was sprinkled with falling plaster.

"At first I thought something had been knocked over," said 22-year-old Amy Greno, who an hour after the incident still was visibly shaken. "I got on the phone and called the operator and asked her to get the police."

The Grenos' moment of terror lasted only long enough for some unidentified persons to pump 15 bullets through a vacant apartment window at the Grand Canyon apartment complex.

The bullets not only had passed through the window of the vacant apartment, but also through a dividing wall, kitchen cabinets, an apartment wall and finally into the Greno apartment next door.

"Usually I lay down in front of the TV (where one slug came to rest). I'm sure glad I wasn't there tonight," John said.

HOFFMAN ESTATES police said the empty, bullet-riddled apartment was last occupied by Andrew Viso and his mother, who had moved out Monday night.

Greno said he heard the bullets being fired, sometimes two at a time, "which makes me think there was sure more than one gun involved." He said one gun used in the incident "was either a .44 or .45 caliber. It's too big to be anything else."

Police earlier said that "small caliber" weapons were used in the assault on the apartment.

"We came to Hoffman Estates to get away from the neighborhood we lived in. We lived in a nice apartment, but we were afraid to have our children walk to school," John said. "Now we may move again."

Jasch doesn't want fight—only way to keep his birds

by JERRY THOMAS

Robert Jasch has been given the perplexing task of throwing away a boomerang.

Jasch keeps 11 pigeons at his home at 2605 Hawk Ln., Rolling Meadows. After a neighbor phoned in an anonymous complaint, police ordered Jasch to get rid of the birds.

"I don't know what to do," Jasch sobbed. "If I give my homing pigeons away, they will return. And then all I can do is kill them."

"IF I DON'T, they say they'll take me to court."

"I can't fight them, I can't hire lawyers, and I don't want to fight anybody anyhow," Jasch said.

Jasch appeared before the city council Tuesday to ask its help.

He failed that night to hide the marks of several sleepless nights, but his tears did not keep him from speaking.

"HELP ME and tell me how I can keep my birds. I don't want to kill them," Jasch pleaded.

He told a story of neighborhood harassment and asked the officials to explain why his birds were harmful.

"They don't fly around the neighborhood. I take good care of them," Jasch said.

To exercise his birds, Jasch takes them miles away from his home, releases them and races them home to the pen in his backyard.

Jasch has had 7 of the 11 birds for about six years and the other 4 the

A CALM WEDNESDAY night was interrupted for the John Greno family of Hoffman Estates when several bullets, fired into a neighboring vacant apartment, continued on through the Grenos' kitchen wall and into their living room. One bullet hole is near the top cabinets, upper right, while a second one is blocked from view by 5-year-old Laura who is sitting on her father's lap. Police are investigating the shooting.

Man charged with trespass at club

A Hoffman Estates man accused of taking an ax into the Hoffman Estates Boys' Club Aug. 28 will appear in Cook County Circuit Court Oct. 15 on a charge of criminal trespass.

Officials of the Club signed the complaint against Carlo Erpito, 138 Payson, who earlier had expected to be charged with disorderly conduct.

A hearing on the case Friday in Hoffman Estates was continued until October because Erpito had no opportunity to prepare a defense against the new charge.

Officials for the club refused to comment on the case.

Erpito, who is believed to be in his 40s, was arrested Aug. 28 after allegedly using an ax to tear two wood moldings off a wall at the club, 161 Illinois Blvd. He said the incident arose out of a dispute with club officials.

Ford challenges Carter to 'earn' trust

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — President Ford officially opened his campaign against Jimmy Carter at his alma mater Wednesday, challenging the Democratic candidate head-on with "It is not enough for anyone to say 'trust me' — trust must be earned."

Ford came back to the University of Michigan where he was graduated 40 years ago and said he led the nation to "an incredible comeback" during his two years in the White House.

"The question in this campaign of 1976 is not, 'Who has the better vision of America?'" Ford said. "The question is, 'Who will act to make that vision a reality?'"

FORD'S SPEECH was his first outside Washington since winning the Republican nomination for election.

There were hecklers in the Michigan audience, but Ford got a one-minute standing ovation when he made his entrance with his wife.

Just as Ford was winding up his speech, a firecracker went off in the upper balcony of the Crisler Arena. Secret Service agents rushed to the spot. No one was injured.

Ford's speech was aimed at what White House aides say is Carter's greatest weakness — apparent indecisiveness and inconsistency. It said the American public deserves "specifics — not smiles, performance — not promises" from candidates.

"IT IS NOT enough for anyone to say 'Trust me.' Trust must be earned. Trust is not having to guess what a candidate means. Trust is leveling with the people before the election about what we're going to do after the election.

"Trust is not being all things to all people, but being the same thing to all people. Trust is not cleverly shading words so that each separate audience can hear what it wants to hear, but saying plainly and simply what you mean and meaning what you say."

In policy matters, Ford broke major

new ground only in the area of housing.

He said he would recommend changes in the Federal Housing Administration law "to reduce down payments on lower and middle priced housing, by up to 50 per cent."

He also said he would order the Housing and Urban Development Dept. to speed up a new federal guarantee program to lower monthly payments in early years of ownership and gradually increase them as family income rises.

ON OTHER MAJOR issues, Ford pledged to continue policies which he said were aimed at creating 2.5 million new jobs each year, holding down inflation, assuring all Americans "accessible and affordable" health care, producing "quality education," and foreign policies to keep the nation out of war.

Ford said he would fight unemployment "with an emphasis on our youth, especially the minorities," to produce "permanent jobs" in the private sector rather than "demonizing, dead-end jobs paid for out of the federal treasury."

Ford, hinting at some new future effort to help young Americans entering the job market, recalled the government has grants, loans and scholarships to help provide a college education.

"I believe we can apply this same principle to create a program for young people who choose not to go to college, but want a job at which they can learn a trade, a craft or practical business skills," he said.

Fund-raising events planned for the next several weeks have been approved by the Schaumburg Village Board.

Village officials approved and waived business license fees for a White Elephant sale from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sept. 25 at the Weatherfield Quads Clubhouse, 108 Carver Ln., a Flea Market sponsored by the Tenants' Assn. of the Country Knoll apartment complex from noon to 7 p.m. Sept. 26 at 1010 Knollwood Dr., and an Oct. 16 tag day for the Schaumburg Hockey League.

Also approved was Schaumburg Lions Club's annual candy sale, Oct. 7 to 9.

1-day liquor licenses OKd

Village officials have approved one-day licenses to permit the sale of alcoholic beverages at three local events.

Their action will allow liquor to be sold by the drink at a fund-raiser planned Saturday at Woodfield Shopping Center by the Elk Grove-Schaumburg Townships Mental Health Center.

Temporary licenses also were approved for an International Ski Club Dance Sept. 25 at International Village apartment complex, Meacham and Algonquin roads, and an Oct. 7 wine-tasting party at Woodfield sponsored by the School for Life, an adult educational group.

Site-improvement pact OKd

An $88,000 contract for general site-improvement work at Schaumburg's new deep well being installed in the Sheffield Manor townhouse development, near Bode Road and Knollwood Drive, has been awarded to G.S. Adams Co., the low bidder.

It will be Schaumburg's fourth deep well. The village water system also includes 15 shallow wells.

2 appointments approved

Trustees have ratified Village Pres. Raymond Kessell's appointment of Frank Domenico, 703 Lemah Ln., to the Schaumburg Youth Outreach committee, and Clifford Skarr, 329 Branchwood Ct., to the board of health.

First reading for vandal law

Trustees have accepted an ordinance for first reading which empowers a circuit court judge to levy fines of up to $500 against parents of Schaumburg youths found guilty of vandalism.

Village board members also instructed Village Atty. Jack M. Siegel to prepare an ordinance creating fines of from $15 to $500 against persons found guilty of littering village streets.

Final reading of the vandalism ordinance is scheduled for the Sept. 21 village board meeting. The littering law is expected for first reading at the same meeting.

Completion date for Jefferson now Dec. 30

Completion of the $2 million Jefferson School in Hoffman Estates is not expected until Dec. 30 because of an oversight in early plans for the school, the Palatine Township Dist. 15 Board of Education was told Wednesday night.

Richard Donatoni, a representative of the architectural firm involved in the construction, told the board that steel needed to support folding partition walls in the school had not been provided in building plans and installing the necessary steel would prevent occupancy on Nov. 1, as the board had been informed in August.

Donatoni had told the board about the steel at its August meeting but made no mention of a delay. Board members Wednesday reacted angrily to his statement.

"AT THE LAST meeting I was not aware that it would cause that kind of delay," Donatoni said.

"But we hire you to foresee it," said Patsy Kelly, board member.

Board member Everett Charlier said he had visited the construction site in the Winston Knolls subdivision several times and was disappointed with the small number of workmen he saw.

Henry J. Schillmoeller, a representative of the general contracting firm involved in the project, said he had told one subcontractor involved in the project that he must have more men at the site by Monday or he would be dismissed.

Another board member, Irene Sjoestedt, asked Donatoni and Schillmoeller why all the windows had not been installed in the school building, which eventually will accommodate approximately 670 students.

"It doesn't stand to reason to me that you can't close up those windows," Ms. Sjoestedt said.

IN CLOSING the discussion, Board Pres. Joel Meyer said it was clear "the board has expressed its disappointment" and told Donatoni that if any other delays should become apparent before the board's October meeting, the district's superintendent should be notified immediately.

"You're responsible to one board of education. We're responsible to a very large school district," Meyer said.

The board also approved an $18.5 million 1976-77 operating budget Wednesday after Meyer told the members that the district would receive more than $350,000 in state aid beyond what had been anticipated in preparing the tentative budget.

past three years.

"A PAIR were my Father's Day present from the kids," he said.

Jasch said he is not a defiant person and does not wish to battle the city.

"But, I don't understand what this is hurting. Is it good for them to ask me to kill my birds?" he asked.

Jasch 44, remembers a time 26 years ago when he was the proud owner of a flock of 100 homing pigeons. "I was drafted and no one else was able to care for the birds, and so my mother had them slaughtered," he said.

"I can't do that, not this time, it isn't right," Jasch said.

"I'LL DO ANYTHING else I can to keep the birds and I'd promise there would be no more. I couldn't keep them from breeding, but I could take away the eggs and substitute glass eggs."

"Then my birds will get disgusted and then maybe they will learn to accept it and maybe I could let them out less."

Jasch said he is going to try once more to convince city officials to let him keep his birds. If that fails, he hopes to find a new home for them. In rare cases, homing pigeons can be retrained, he said, "so maybe my birds will forget me."

Mayor Roland J. Meyer said he hopes the city's ordinance committee will find a solution.

"I'd hate to think that we have become so urbanized or callous as to take this action," he said.

City Police said Jasch was issued a warning ticket Sept. 11 notifying him he is in violation of a city ordinance that prohibits keeping pigeons.

"If Jasch does not dispose of the birds by about Sept. 25 we will cite him," Police Chief Lewis Case said.

Jasch would then be forced to appear in Cook County Circuit Court on the matter.

Completion date for Jefferson now Dec. 30

Completion of the $2 million Jefferson School in Hoffman Estates is not expected until Dec. 30 because of an oversight in early plans for the school, the Palatine Township Dist. 15 Board of Education was told Wednesday night.

Ruling sought on school aid

A court decision on the Illinois Office of Education's interpretation of state-aid limitations for school districts is being sought by High School Dist. 211.

The Dist. 214 Board of Education approved filing a suit with other high school districts to get a clarification on the state education office's opinion.

State law limits the additional amount of state aid a district may receive each year to 25 per cent more than the amount the district received the previous year.

THE STATE OFFICE is figuring the limitation for additional state aid on the actual amount school districts received in state aid last year instead of the amount districts would have received if the state could fully fund state aid, Robert Weber, associate superintendent for business services, said.

Weber said Dist. 214 officials believe the percentage formula should use the amount of state funding a district is qualified to receive, not the actual amount received.

Because a limited amount of state money was available for state aid last year, districts received about 85 per cent of the money they were entitled to receive.

WEBER SAID THE state's interpretation of the funding limits would cost Dist. 214 $123,000 in general state aid for the 1976-77 school year. Dist. 214 anticipates receiving $10.8 million in state aid.

The district's loss would be compounded in future years if the state continues to use its interpretation because the base amount for the formula would be lower, he said.

Richard Donatoni, a representative of the architectural firm involved in the construction, told the board that steel needed to support folding partition walls in the school had not been provided in building plans and installing the necessary steel would prevent occupancy on Nov. 1, as the board had been informed in August.

Donatoni had told the board about the steel at its August meeting but made no mention of a delay. Board members Wednesday reacted angrily to his statement.

"AT THE LAST meeting I was not aware that it would cause that kind of delay," Donatoni said.

"But we hire you to foresee it," said Patsy Kelly, board member.

Board member Everett Charlier said he had visited the construction site in the Winston Knolls subdivision several times and was disappointed with the small number of workmen he saw.

Henry J. Schillmoeller, a representative of the general contracting firm involved in the project, said he had told one subcontractor involved in the project that he must have more men at the site by Monday or he would be dismissed.

Another board member, Irene Sjostedt, asked Donatoni and Schillmoeller why all the windows had not been installed in the school building, which eventually will accommodate approximately 670 students.

"It doesn't stand to reason to me that you can't close up those windows," Ms. Sjostedt said.

IN CLASING the discussion, Board Pres. Joel Meyer said it was clear "the board has expressed its disapproval" and told Donatoni that if any other delays should become apparent before the board's October meeting, the district's superintendent should be notified immediately.

"You're responsible to one board of education. We're responsible to a very large school district," Meyer said.

The board also approved an $18.5 million 1976-77 operating budget Wednesday after Meyer told the members that the district would receive more than $350,000 in state aid beyond what had been anticipated in preparing the tentative budget.

ROBERT JASCH doesn't want to kill his birds, but he may be forced to if he cannot retrain the homing pigeons he has raised at his home in Rolling Meadows. The city has given him about two weeks to get rid of the birds, which violate city ordinance.

Jasch wants his birds, not a fight

by JERRY THOMAS

Robert Jasch has been given the perplexing task of throwing away a boomerang.

Jasch keeps 11 pigeons at his home at 2605 Hawk Ln., Rolling Meadows. After a neighbor phoned in an anonymous complaint, police ordered Jasch to get rid of the birds.

"I don't know what to do," Jasch sobbed. "If I give my homing pigeons away, they will return. And then all I can do is kill them."

"IF I DON'T," they say they'll take me to court."

"I can't fight them, I can't hire lawyers, and I don't want to fight anybody anyhow," Jasch said.

Jasch appeared before the city council Tuesday to ask its help.

He failed that night to hide the marks of several sleepless nights, but his tears did not keep him from speaking.

"HELP ME and tell me how I can keep my birds. I don't want to kill them," Jasch pleaded.

He told a story of neighborhood harassment and asked the officials to explain why his birds were harmful.

"They don't fly around the neighborhood. I take good care of them," Jasch said.

To exercise his birds, Jasch takes them miles away from his home, releases them and races them home to the pen in his backyard.

Jasch has had 7 of the 11 birds for about six years and the other 4 the past three years.

"A PAIR were my Father's Day present from the kids," he said.

Jasch said he is not a defiant person and does not wish to battle the city.

"But, I don't understand what this is hurting. Is it good for them to ask me to kill my birds?" he asked.

Jasch 44, remembers a time 26 years ago when he was the proud owner of a flock of 100 homing pigeons. "I was drafted and no one else was able to care for the birds, and so my mother had them slaughtered," he said.

"I can't do that, not this time, it isn't right," Jasch said.

"I'LL DO ANYTHING else I can to keep the birds and I'd promise there would be no more. I couldn't keep them from breeding, but I could take away the eggs and substitute glass eggs.

"Then my birds will get disgusted and then maybe they will learn to accept it and maybe I could let them out less."

Jasch said he is going to try once more to convince city officials to let him keep his birds. If that fails, he hopes to find a new home for them. In rare cases, homing pigeons can be retrained, he said, "so maybe my birds will forget me."

City Police said Jasch was issued a warning ticket Sept. 11 notifying him he is in violation of a city ordinance that prohibits keeping pigeons.

"If Jasch does not dispose of the birds by about Sept. 25 we will cite him," Police Chief Lewis Case said. Jasch would then be forced to appear in Cook County Circuit Court on the matter.

Ford challenges Carter to 'earn' trust

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — President Ford officially opened his campaign against Jimmy Carter at his alma mater Wednesday, challenging the Democratic candidate head-on with "it is not enough for anyone to say 'trust me' — trust must be earned."

Ford came back to the University of Michigan where he was graduated 40 years ago and said he led the nation to "an incredible comeback" during his two years in the White House.

"The question in this campaign of 1976 is not, 'Who has the better vision of America?'" Ford said. "The question is, 'Who will act to make that vision a reality?'"

FORD'S SPEECH was his first outside Washington since winning the Republican nomination for election.

There were hecklers in the Michigan audience, but Ford got a one-minute standing ovation when he made his entrance with his wife.

Just as Ford was winding up his speech, a firecracker went off in the upper balcony of the Crisler Arena. Secret Service agents rushed to the spot. No one was injured.

Ford's speech was aimed at what White House aides say is Carter's greatest weakness — apparent indecisiveness and inconsistency. It said the American public deserves "specifics — not smiles, performance — not promises" from candidates.

"IT IS NOT enough for anyone to say 'Trust me.' Trust must be earned. Trust is not having to guess what a candidate means. Trust is leveling with the people before the election about what we're going to do after the election.

"Trust is not being all things to all people, but being the same thing to all people. Trust is not cleverly shading words so that each separate audience can hear what it wants to hear, but saying plainly and simply what you mean and meaning what you say."

In policy matters, Ford broke major

new ground only in the area of housing.

He said he would recommend changes in the Federal Housing Administration law "to reduce down payments on lower and middle priced housing, by up to 50 per cent."

He also said he would order the Housing and Urban Development Dept. to speed up a new federal guarantee program to lower monthly payments in early years of ownership and gradually increase them as family income rises.

ON OTHER MAJOR issues, Ford pledged to continue policies which he said were aimed at creating 2.5 million new jobs each year, holding down inflation, assuring all Americans "accessible and affordable" health care, producing "quality education" and foreign policies to keep the nation out of war.

Ford said he would fight unemployment "with an emphasis on our youth, especially the minorities," to produce "permanent jobs" in the private sector rather than "demeaning, dead-end jobs paid for out of the federal treasury."

Ford, hinting at some new future effort to help young Americans entering the job market, recalled the government has grants, loans and scholarships to help provide a college education.

"I believe we can apply this same principle to create a program for young people who choose not to go to college, but want a job at which they can learn a trade, a craft or practical business skills," he said.

Little-used O'Hare bus on its way out?

by NANCY GOTLER

Five days a week Mike Kereven drives an empty Continental Air Transport Co. bus down Northwest Highway to O'Hare Airport.

His employers say they can't afford to continue the service without modifying it. But, possibly because of pressure from Arlington Heights Village Pres. James T. Ryan, the company won't admit what Kereven and fellow driver Ed Rice say is inevitable: that the runs will be halted.

"We can't afford to keep it up now," Continental Vice Pres. John C. McCarthy said, "but I can't say that it definitely will be discontinued."

"We're planning on talking with (Northwest suburban) village officials next week and hope to look at readjustment of the schedule," he said. "Things like cutting back the number of runs a day, stepping up limousine service and a guaranteed ridership program are possibilities."

BUT SOME SAY those measures would even further discourage riders because buses will not be available when they are needed and residents will not patronize a service that might be temporary.

Taking a bus to the airport does have advantages. The one-way fare is $4.25, compared to approximately $11 for a cab and $15 for a limousine. And residents who drive to O'Hare will be assessed a $3.15-per-day parking fee.

The history of Continental's service to the Northwest suburbs has been controversial and erratic. In 1974 the route between the suburbs and the airport was discontinued because of low ridership and rising fuel costs.

Last year Ryan, angered at that decision, filed a complaint against Continental with the Illinois Commerce Commission in an attempt to force the company to either resume service or lose its rights to the route.

IN JUNE, Continental agreed to reinstate the route on a trial basis. But McCarthy said the experiment has been disappointing. The run averages 1.7 passengers per trip, far below his prediction of eight.

And bus driver Kereven said he picks up only one passenger a week during his 11 a.m. route from Arlington Park racetrack to the airport.

The buses, with a 29 passenger capacity, leave Arlington Park at 6, 7:20, 11 a.m. and 2 and 5:10 p.m. and the airport at 10:35 a.m., 1:35, 4:15 and 6:30 p.m. Only the 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.

Buses leave Palatine from the Smith and Colfax station at 5:55, 7:10 a.m. and 5 p.m.

"The 120-day trial run was supposed to end the end of August," McCarthy said, "but because we wanted to have a few more figures after Labor Day, it's been extended until the end of September."

CONTINENTAL HAS a contract with the City of Chicago for ground transportation and must provide service "where there is a need," he said.

However, if it is determined there is no need for bus service between the Northwest suburbs and the airport, McCarthy said Continental could discontinue service without violating its charter.

Ryan is on vacation and unavailable for comment on Continental's current problem, but Palatine Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones said if service is halted area residents will not feel a transportation pinch.

"I don't know too many people who are taking the bus," he said, "because it's not as convenient for them. Many executives living in our area are on expense accounts and just take a limousine."

HE SAID HE favors strengthening the Regional Transportation Authority service to the Northwest suburbs instead of weakened Continental service.

"Although I told Mr. Ryan at the time (of his complaint about Continental to ICC) that we would back his action," Jones said, "I would favor an RTA that functions."

"If Continental discontinued its service, it probably wouldn't affect the people here any more than if the RTA discontinued its service," he said. "The people in the Northwest suburbs are already paying for transportation service — the RTA — and not getting it."

Meanwhile, McCarthy is planning how to cope with the problem. "People are used to door-to-door service and have come to expect it. It's going to be a matter of time and re-education. People are just going to have to be educated toward mass transportation."

Olympics with a twist

About 5,000 employees of Schaumburg's Motorola plant participated in a two-day company olympics commemorating the electronic firm's participation in the Winter and Summer Olympic games.

Motorola supplied a variety of communications systems used by the Olympic teams in Innsbruck and Montreal.

The local athletes took part in about 43 events, many of them homespun activities like jumping over mud puddles.

The huge electronics complex shut down from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. both days to allow workers to participate.

Lone bid rejected for park footpath

The Salt Creek Park District Board has rejected a single bid for construction of the South Park footpath and will advertise for bids again before its Sept. 28 meeting.

The footpath is a planned shortcut to South Park at the southwest corner of Euclid Avenue and Rohlfing Road. The path will lead children to Theda Lane adjacent to the park and keep them off of the congested corner.

Kiln for ceramics class OK'd

The board authorized spending $700 for a kiln to be used for a ceramics program sponsored by the park district.

Schnell replacement in month?

Park commissioners met in executive session to discuss appointment of a new commissioner to replace Denis L. Schnell, who resigned in May.

Park District Director James DeVos said the vacancy may be filled within a month.

Zinging bullets disturb family's TV viewing

by DANN GIRE

John and Amy Greno moved to Hoffman Estates from Chicago three months ago to get away from the high crime area where they lived.

They thought the suburbs would be a nice place to raise their two children, Mark, 4, and Laura, 5.

That was before bullets began zinging through their apartment at 216 Grand Canyon Pkwy. Wednesday night.

"I was watching 'Starsky and Hutch' when I heard what I thought was a lot of pounding on the walls," John, 23, said. "Then after three or four shots, I knew bullets were coming through the wall. I shouted to Amy to stay (in the bedroom) with the kids. I hit the floor."

ONE BULLET went through the kitchen wall, bounded off the ceiling and hit the living room curtain rod. Others were imbedded in a kitchen cabinet. Another put a sizable dent in a steel filing cabinet. The apartment was sprinkled with falling plaster.

"At first I thought something had been knocked over," said 22-year-old Amy Greno, who an hour after the incident still was visibly shaken. "I got on the phone and called the operator and asked her to get the police."

The bullets not only had passed through the window of the vacant apartment, but also through a dividing wall, kitchen cabinets, an apartment wall and finally into the Greno apartment next door.

"Usually I lay down in front of the TV (where one slug came to rest). I'm sure glad I wasn't there tonight," John said.

Greno said he heard the bullets being fired, sometimes two at a time, "which makes me think there was sure more than one gun involved." He said one gun used in the incident "was either a .44 or .45 caliber. It's too big to be anything else."

Police earlier said that "small caliber" weapons were used in the assault on the apartment.

Inverness' elusive troublemaker, the nail thrower, is still at it after nine years.

But the Inverness Village Board has made it a special project to find out who keeps throwing nails across Baldwin Road near Inverness Road. Village Pres. Russell V. Puzey has asked Betsy Passarelli, chairman of the police committee, to make a special effort to identify the culprit within the next two months.

Village Clerk Sandy Johnson said the nail throwing "happens very frequently." She said there have been 6 to 10 complaints about it during the past two months.

HUNDREDS OF rusty nails line Baldwin Road at the spot the thrower seems to like best. The nails, usually new and ranging from roof to finishing nails, are thrown most frequently before a weekend or holiday when the road would be heavily traveled, according to reports and complaints from residents.

Either Cook County Sheriff's police or Mrs. Johnson sweep the nails off the road when a complaint is called in.

Despite the special effort to identify the nail thrower, Barrington Police Chief Howard Peek said he doesn't know what else can be done.

"We've tried surveillance," Peek said, "but it's rather intermittent. I've even sat out there personally."

Mrs. Passarelli said anyone who sees a person throwing nails across the road or has helpful information should get in touch with the Barrington police immediately at 381-2141.

Tavern liquor license ban urged

Schaumburg officials will ask the Illinois Appellate Court to rule on village attempts to reinstate a 20-day liquor license suspension for a village nightclub.

Schaumburg trustees supported Village Pres. Raymond Kessell's decision to appeal a Cook County Circuit Court ruling that upheld the Illinois Liquor Control Commission's decision to reduce the license suspension for B'Ginnings Ltd. from 20 days to three.

Kessell had ordered the 20-day suspension after witnesses at a hearing, one of them an off-duty policeman, said they were beaten by employees at the club, 1227 E. Golf Rd. He also said he heard private testimony that employees made "sexual advances" toward a young girl.

WHEN HE UPHELD the state commission's ruling, Judge Arthur Dunne said he agreed with Kessell's decision and even found the 20-day suspension "lenient." But he said he had no legal authority to overrule the state agency.

Kessell said it is "absolutely ridiculous to have a village liquor commissioner if his authority is overruled not only by the state commission but also by the circuit court."

"Apparently the only unquestionable duty of a local liquor commissioner is to issue licenses," he said.

VILLAGE ATTY. Erwin Jentsch said Dunne told him the state liquor commission's decision "is an area that begs for interpretation by a reviewing court."

"I definitely think that this is sufficiently important for the village to proceed with an appeal, and I think we have an excellent case," Jentsch said.

A spokesman for the state liquor commission said the suspension was reduced because only two of the persons who said they were beaten filed criminal assault charges and both cases were dismissed when the plaintiffs failed to appear in court.

$10,000 OK'd to aid seniors program

A $10,000 federal grant to develop an outreach program to assist senior citizens has been awarded to the Elk Grove-Schaumburg Townships Mental Health Center.

Jordan Rosen, center executive director, said he was notified of the approval Wednesday. The center had requested $12,000 but will be able to fund the program with the smaller amount, he said.

The center is interviewing for a full-time employee to provide counseling and information to senior citizens in the two townships.

In addition to counseling, the new employee would help the elderly learn to shop effectively or to be sure meals are delivered in the home if needed, Rosen said.

The grant can be renewed for two years. When federal funding ceases, the two townships and the center will have to fund the program.

Sun storms send TV viewers bad vibes

by PAUL GORES
What's causing those black, wavy lines on your television set when it's tuned to WBBM-TV, Channel 2? The answer is probably 93 million miles away.
Costation interference, or "venetian blinds" as TV repairmen call it, are the result of atmospheric conditions caused by storms on the sun.
One local television repairman said sun storms, which appear as spots on the sun's surface, give off a tremendous amount of energy which ionizes upper layers of the atmosphere and causes them to reflect TV signals normally lost to the atmosphere.

As a result, TV signals from stations as far as 1,000 miles away are reflected and picked up by low-channel receivers, such as Channel 2.
"SO WHAT YOU'RE really seeing is probably a station from Milwaukee or somewhere trying to come in on Channel 2," he said. "And there's nothing you can do about it." This type of interference occurs most as seasons change.
Several area residents have complained within the last two weeks about black, wavy lines on Channel 2. Citizens' Band radios or some other type of electrical source were suspected as the cause.

L. A. Pierce, director of the technical department for CBS in Chicago, agreed sun storms are probably the source of interference.
"It is characteristic of low frequencies such as Channel 2 to pick up signals from stations as far as 1,000 miles away," Pierce said.
Nothing can be done to eliminate or reduce interference caused by sun storms, Pierce said.

'We can't afford it': McCarthy

by NANCY GOTLER
Five days a week Mike Kereven drives an empty Continental Air Transport Co. bus down Northwest Highway to O'Hare Airport.

Despite the special effort to identify the nail thrower, Barrington Police Chief Howard Peek said he doesn't know what else can be done.

"We've tried surveillance," Peek said, "but it's rather intermittent. I've even sat out there personally."

Mrs. Passarelli said anyone who sees a person throwing nails across the road or has helpful information should get in touch with the Barrington police immediately at 381-2141.

Dec. 30 completion for Jefferson

Completion of the $2 million Jefferson School in Hoffman Estates is not expected until Dec. 30 because of an oversight in early plans for the school, the Palatine Township Dist. 15 Board of Education was told Wednesday night.

Richard Donatoni, a representative of the architectural firm involved in the construction, told the board that steel needed to support folding partition walls in the school had not been provided in building plans and installing the necessary steel would prevent occupancy on Nov. 1, as the board had been informed in August.

Donatoni had told the board about the steel at its August meeting but made no mention of a delay. Board members Wednesday reacted angrily to his statement.

"AT THE LAST meeting I was not aware that it would cause that kind of delay," Donatoni said.

"But we hire you to foresee it," said (Continued on Page 6)

Ford challenges Carter to 'earn' trust

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — President Ford officially opened his campaign against Jimmy Carter at his alma mater Wednesday, challenging the Democratic candidate head-on with "It is not enough for anyone to say 'trust me' — trust must be earned."

Ford came back to the University of Michigan where he was graduated 40 years ago and said he led the nation to "an incredible comeback" during his two years in the White House.

"The question in this campaign of 1976 is not, 'Who has the better vision of America?' Ford said. "The question is, 'Who will act to make that vision a reality?'"

FORD'S SPEECH was his first outside Washington since winning the Republican nomination for election.

There were hecklers in the Michigan audience, but Ford got a one-minute standing ovation when he made his entrance with his wife.

Just as Ford was winding up his speech, a firecracker went off in the upper balcony of the Crisler Arena. Secret Service agents rushed to the spot. No one was injured.

Ford's speech was aimed at what White House aides say is Carter's greatest weakness — apparent indecisiveness and inconsistency. It said the American public deserves "specifics — not smiles, performance — not promises" from candidates.

"IT IS NOT enough for anyone to say 'Trust me.' Trust must be earned. Trust is not having to guess what a candidate means. Trust is leveling with the people before the election about what we're going to do after the election.

"Trust is not being all things to all people, but being the same thing to all people. Trust is not cleverly shading words so that each separate audience can hear what it wants to hear, but saying plainly and simply what you mean and meaning what you say."

In policy matters, Ford broke major

new ground only in the area of housing.

He said he would recommend changes in the Federal Housing Administration law "to reduce down payments on lower and middle-priced housing, by up to 50 per cent."

He also said he would order the Housing and Urban Development Dept. to speed up a new federal guarantee program to lower monthly payments in early years of ownership and gradually increase them as family income rises.

ON OTHER MAJOR issues, Ford pledged to continue policies which he said were aimed at creating 2.5 million new jobs each year, holding down inflation, assuring all Americans "accessible and affordable" health care, producing "quality education," and foreign policies to keep the nation out of war.

Ford said he would fight unemployment "with an emphasis on our youth, especially the minorities," to produce "permanent jobs" in the private sector rather than "demeaning, dead-end jobs paid for out of the federal treasury."

Ford, hinting at some new future effort to help young Americans entering the job market, recalled the government has grants, loans and scholarships to help provide a college education.

"I believe we can apply this same principle to create a program for young people who choose not to go to college, but want a job at which they can learn a trade, a craft or practical business skills," he said.

The program involves teenagers working on landscaping projects.

The competition is open to all ages and registration will be accepted at Community Park through Sept. 24. For more information call 991-0333.

An audit of Palatine village funds for the fiscal year ending April 30, 1976, shows the village is in "sound financial shape," said John Hedstrom, finance director.

"We have absolutely no problems," Hedstrom said in outlining the village's financial picture. He said the balance in most village accounts is on the plus side because receipts have exceeded expenditures.

The total village balance as of April 30 is $2.98 million, however, Village Mgr. Anton H. Harwig said much of this money is in restricted funds which can be spent only for designated accounts.

HARWIG ADDED that the $72,553 surplus in the general fund, which represents the amount of receipts over disbursements for the fiscal year, presents a better picture of the actual village balance.

When added to the balance in the general fund for the period beginning May 1, 1975, the account shows a $314,114 surplus.

The audit, prepared by Veatch, Rich and Nadler, Certified Public Accountants, Chicago, was reviewed briefly by the village board this week, but a more thorough study of the document is planned within the next few weeks.

Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones, in commenting about the audit, said the total village fund balance of $2.98 million represented a $600,000 increase over the balance since April 30, 1973. "I think that shows we're in pretty good shape considering the economy," Jones said.

TRUSTEE Richard W. Fonte, chairman of the administration, finance and legislation committee, said the audit figures "show that the village's expenditure policies have led to an increase in the surplus."

Harwig said in light of the audit figures and the village's 1976-77 budget, he feels the board's action in reducing the village's 1976 tax rate by about 12.5 per cent is a reasonable step.

"We are well within the means of the present budget and I'm not at all uncomfortable in the reduction of the tax rate," Harwig said Wednesday.

The board this week adopted a 1976 tax levy ordinance totaling $963,575, almost $51,400 less than the 1975 levy. Village officials said the reduced levy coupled with an anticipated $12.5 million increase in the village's total assessed valuation could lead to a drop of as much as 9.5 cents in the 1976 village tax rate.

The 1976 village tax rate is estimated at 65.77 cents per $100 assessed valuation. The 1975 village tax rate was 75.24 cents per $100 assessed valuation.

Request by Hunting Ridge for crossing guard studied

A request from the principal of Hunting Ridge School for a crossing guard at Illinois Avenue and Mallard Drive will be considered by the Palatine Health, Safety and Welfare Committee.

Forrest T. Neilson, principal of Hunting Ridge School, 1105 W. Illinois Ave., said an estimated 260 students are expected to cross the intersection when going to school.

In a letter to Village Mgr. Anton H. Harwig, Neilson said the number of students crossing the intersection represents a substantial increase because it will include new students from the Willow Walk, Cannongate, Versailles and Whytecliff subdivisions who were previously bused to Paddock School.

THE STUDENTS were reassigned this year according to a new plan adopted by Palatine Township Dist. 15.

"This (the number of students) coupled with the high school traffic and those using Mallard Drive to avoid the high school traffic and the congestion surrounding Harper College, makes a situation too dangerous to be handled by the school safety patrol," Neilson said.

Neilson said the need for a crossing guard at the intersection has been a concern of school officials for several years and has been made even more urgent this year because of the reassignment plan.

The matter was referred to committee to determine if funds should be budgeted for the request.

Also placed in committee was a request by Trustee Fred J. Zajonc that the village consider installation of four-way stop signs at Illinois Avenue and Quentin Road. Zajonc said he has received numerous calls from residents saying the intersection is dangerous and merits stop signs.

The matter was placed in Zajonc's streets and traffic committee for study.

Palatine Park wrapup

Bid for golf course fence accepted

A bid for chain-link fencing for portions of the Palatine Hills Golf Course has been accepted by the Palatine Park District. Fred Hall, park district director, said a bid of $4.79 per-linear foot by the Peerless Fence Co. of Chicago was approved by the board. Hall said the fencing would be erected in areas causing the most problems with pedestrians. Hall said the park district may use from 2,000 to 4,000 linear feet of fencing at the golf course.

Only one bidder for van

The park board has delayed the purchase of a van. Only one bid on the van has been received by the board. The board decided not to open the bid until some other offers are received.

Eagle Park almost ready

Eagle Park will be completed when the contractor "does a last few things," Hall said. This includes installation of bleachers and some cleaning, touch-up painting and patchwork at the park.

Inverness Board wrapup

Contract awarded for drainage work

The Inverness Village Board has awarded a contract to Gierz-Melahn Asphalt Co. of Elgin for storm drainage improvements on Baldwin Road and for the resurfacing of damaged village roads. Gierz-Melahn was the low bidder on both projects, bidding $33,044 for the drainage work and $25,072 for the road resurfacing. Federal revenue-sharing funds and a $10,000 grant from Cook County will finance the drainage improvements. Motor fuel tax funds will be used for resurfacing.

Office for clerk considered

A small building at 1917 Palatine Rd. will be studied as a possible location for the office of Village Clerk Sandy Johnson. The proposed rent for the building is $190 per month. The clerk's office is now located at Mrs. Johnson's home.

House demolition approved

The board authorized condemnation and demolition proceedings for a partially constructed house at 192 Betty Dr. Village Pres. Russell V. Puzey recommended the action because construction on the house has been "abandoned." The structure is reportedly owned by Matt Taylor, Arlington Heights. He could not be reached for comment Wednesday.

Salt Creek Park wrapup

Lone bid rejected for park footpath

The Salt Creek Park District Board has rejected a single bid for construction of the South Park footpath and will advertise for bids again before its Sept. 28 meeting.

The footpath is a planned shortcut to South Park at the southwest corner of Euclid Avenue and Rohlfing Road. The path will lead children to Theda Lane adjacent to the park and keep them off of the congested corner.

Kiln for ceramics class OK'd

The board authorized spending $700 for a kiln to be used for a ceramics program sponsored by the park district.

Schnell replacement in month?

Park commissioners met in executive session to discuss appointment of a new commissioner to replace Denis L. Schnell, who resigned in May.

Park District Director James DeVos said the vacancy may be filled within a month.

Pool, tennis sites mullied

Sites for the park district's proposed pool and tennis complex also were discussed in the executive session. DeVos said several sites still are being considered.

Zinging bullets disturb family's TV viewing

by DANN GIRE

John and Amy Greno moved to Hoffman Estates from Chicago three months ago to get away from the high crime area where they lived.

They thought the suburbs would be a nice place to raise their two children, Mark, 4, and Laura, 3.

That was before bullets began zinging through their apartment at 216 Grand Canyon Pkwy. Wednesday night.

"I was watching 'Starsky and Hutch' when I heard what I thought was a lot of pounding on the walls," John, 23, said. "Then after three or four shots, I knew bullets were coming through the wall. I shouted to Amy to stay (in the bedroom) with the kids. I hit the floor."

ONE BULLET went through the kitchen wall, bounded off the ceiling and hit the living room curtain rod. Others were imbedded in a kitchen cabinet. Another put a sizable dent in a steel filing cabinet. The apartment was sprinkled with falling plaster.

"At first I thought something had been knocked over," said 22-year-old Amy Greno, who an hour after the incident still was visibly shaken. "I got on the phone and called the operator and asked her to get the police."

The Grenos' moment of terror lasted only long enough for some unidentified persons to pump 15 bullets through a vacant apartment window at the Grand Canyon apartment complex.

The bullets not only had passed through the window of the vacant apartment, but also through a dividing wall, kitchen cabinets, an apartment wall and finally into the Greno apartment next door.

"Usually I lay down in front of the TV (where one slug came to rest). I'm sure glad I wasn't there tonight," John said.

HOFFMAN ESTATES police said the empty, bullet-riddled apartment was last occupied by Andrew Viso and his mother, who had moved out Monday night.

Patsy Kelly, board member.

Board member Everett Charlier said he had visited the construction site in the Winston Knolls subdivision several times and was disappointed with the small number of workmen he saw.

Henry J. Schillmoeller, a representative of the general contracting firm involved in the project, said he had told one subcontractor involved in the project that he must have more men at the site by Monday or he would be dismissed.

Another board member, Irene Sjostedt, asked Donatoni and Schillmoeller why all the windows had not been installed in the school building, which eventually will accommodate approximately 670 students.

"It doesn't stand to reason to me that you can't close up those windows," Ms. Sjostedt said.

IN CLOSING the discussion, Board Pres. Joel Meyer said it was clear "the board has expressed its disappointment" and told Donatoni that if any other delays should become apparent before the board's October meeting, the district's superintendent should be notified immediately.

"You're responsible to one board of education. We're responsible to a very large school district," Meyer said.

The board also approved an $18.5 million 1976-77 operating budget Wednesday after Meyer told the members that the district would receive more than $350,000 in state aid beyond what had been anticipated in preparing the tentative budget.

Two school teachers were to have moved in Tuesday or Wednesday, Mrs. Greno said. "The landlady said she was glad they didn't," she said.

Greno said he heard the bullets being fired, sometimes two at a time, "which makes me think there was sure more than one gun involved." He said one gun used in the incident "was either a .44 or .45 caliber. It's too big to be anything else."

Police earlier said that "small caliber" weapons were used in the assault on the apartment.

"We came to Hoffman Estates to get away from the neighborhood we lived in. We lived in a nice apartment, but we were afraid to have our children walk to school," John said. "Now we may move again."

Voter sign-up ends Friday in village

The last day for voter registration in Palatine is Friday.

The village hall will be open from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. to handle voter registration. Persons 18 and older who have lived in the village 30 days are eligible to register to vote in the Nov. 2 general election.

After Friday, unregistered voters must go the Cook County Building in Chicago to register in order to vote Nov. 2.

A special one-day, in-precinct voter registration drive will be Oct. 5. It will be the last day voters can register in order to vote in the Nov. 2 election.

Each of Palatine's 62 precincts will be open Oct. 5 to accommodate voter registration.

Correction

Brochures outlining fall classes for the Palatine Park District will be mailed the end of this week to residents of the district.

The Herald incorrectly reported Wednesday that brochures had already been mailed.

Persons who fail to receive a brochure by the end of next week should call the park district at 991-0333 for a list of fall classes.

Mail-in registration for fall classes will be accepted through Sept. 25.

by PAUL GORES
What's causing those black, wavy lines on your television set when it's tuned to WBBM-TV, Channel 2? The answer is probably 93 million miles away.
Costation interference, or "venetian blinds" as TV repairmen call it, are the result of atmospheric conditions caused by storms on the sun.
One local television repairman said sun storms, which appear as spots on the sun's surface, give off a tremendous amount of energy which ionizes upper layers of the atmosphere and causes them to reflect TV signals normally lost to the atmosphere.

As a result, TV signals from stations as far as 1,000 miles away are reflected and picked up by low-channel receivers, such as Channel 2.
"SO WHAT YOU'RE really seeing is probably a station from Milwaukee or somewhere trying to come in on Channel 2," he said. "And there's nothing you can do about it." This type of interference occurs most as seasons change.
Several area residents have complained within the last two weeks about black, wavy lines on Channel 2. Citizens' Band radios or some other type of electrical source were suspected as the cause.

L. A. Pierce, director of the technical department for CBS in Chicago, agreed sun storms are probably the source of interference.
"It is characteristic of low frequencies such as Channel 2 to pick up signals from stations as far as 1,000 miles away," Pierce said.
Nothing can be done to eliminate or reduce interference caused by sun storms, Pierce said.

48th Year—248 Mount Prospect, Illinois 60056 Thursday, September 16, 1976 6 sections, 74 pages Single Copy — 15c each

Street strength analysis urged by engineer

A scientific analysis of the strength of Mount Prospect's streets will take place over the next four years if the village board accepts a recommendation to pay $100,000 for the service.
Village Engineer Bernard H. R. Hemminger Wednesday said for $25,000 a year, Novak Dempsey & Associates, a Palatine engineering firm would use a specialized piece of equipment that can determine pavement strength and duration of the streets throughout the village.
"This will take the guesswork out and give us a more scientific method of determining what streets need resurfacing and when," Hemminger said.
HE SAID THE electronic device, which is capable of scanning the streets beneath their surfaces, would be more efficient than the "visual observation" now relied upon by village engineers when studying road conditions. Now, Hemminger said, "If it (a street) looks OK, we don't do anything."
Village Mgr. Robert J. Eppley said Arlington Heights, Palatine and Des Plaines already use the proposed system of "analyzing and cataloging" their streets. After a street's condition is evaluated, the data is stored and catalogued in a computer. "This way, we know how long it will last and the treatment it should have," Eppley said.
Hemminger has formally recommended the village, through Motor Tax Fuel revenues, invest in the street evaluation system.
"If the board approves it, we could start the work in the next couple of weeks," he said. "We'd be getting more than just the use of the machine. We'd also be getting the firm's technical advice."
NOVAK & DEMPSEY specializes in soil investigation and has been involved in testing highway conditions.
The proposal, meanwhile, has been sent to the village public works committee where it will be considered tonight. A recommendation would be sent to the full board and acted upon at its Tuesday night meeting.
Hemminger said it would be best to divide the village into four sections and survey the streets of one section each year. "We would do it over a four-year period so as not to have such a large outlay at one time," he said.
$4,000 collected for Crusade of Mercy drive
Nearly $4,000 already has been collected for the 1976-77 Mount Prospect-Prospect Heights Crusade of Mercy drive, Chapter Pres. William Warner said.
The donations, obtained from previous donors who received an advanced mailing this month, are the first in a drive which hopes to collect $33,000 before the end of the year. Warner said the drive's main push will come in the next two months, although contributions will be accepted into next year. Mount Prospect and Prospect Heights residents should already have received letters asking for contributions, he said.
School and business campaigns will begin within the next two weeks, Warner said.
EACH DOLLAR raised by the local chapter will be matched with about a $2 contribution from the Metropolitan Crusade of Mercy. If the local chapter meets its $33,000 goal, the group projects its final funding at about $99,000.
Last year, the crusade failed to meet its projected goal of $31,000. Local donors gave $28,997 with contributions from the Metropolitan campaign bringing the total to $106,000.
Service organizations receiving funds from the local chapter include the Boy Scouts, the Girl Scouts, the Salvation Army Counseling Center, the Salvation Army Service Center, the Northwest Mental Health Clinic, the Northwest Suburban Homemaker Service, Clearbrook Center and the Camp Fire Girls of Metropolitan Chicago Inc.
For further information on the fund-raising drive, contact Warner at 295-5300.

Village to study suggestion to abandon dry well

A recommendation to abandon a village well which went dry because of construction on the Metropolitan Sanitary District's deep tunnel project will be considered tonight by Mount Prospect's public works committee.
The meeting begins at 8 p.m. in the village hall, 100 S. Emerson St.
Well 10, at Rand Road and Gregory Street, was sealed off in August by MSD grouting at a nearby sewer shaft. Grouting is a method by which cement is pumped into the ground to reinforce it.
THE UNAVAILABILITY of the well has not hurt the village's water supply, and Mount Prospect officials have suggested the old shallow well be permanently shut down.
Rather than attempting to activate the now inoperable well, village administrators have recommended continuing work on a two million gallon underground tank at the Old Orchard Country Club golf course so it can be used as a future water storage facility.
Village Mgr. Robert J. Eppley said the administration has recommended abandoning the well because it is not producing enough water. Trustee Edward B. Rhea Jr., chairman of the public works committee, said he hopes the committee will arrive at a recommendation to pass on to the village board.
If the board accepts a proposal to permanently shut down the well, Eppley suggested the village consider selling the pumping equipment, appraising the land surrounding the well and using the revenue from the sale to activate the proposed well on the golf course. "We've got the tank," Eppley said. "Let's use it."
There currently are no pumping facilities at the tank, referred to by officials as Well 17. The equipment needed to activate the tank, however, could be acquired if the proposal is approved.
Officials have said Well 17 could be put to better use for storage than Well 10, particularly in view of the village's long-term goal of acquiring Lake Michigan water.

Ford challenges Carter to 'earn' trust

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — President Ford officially opened his campaign against Jimmy Carter at his alma mater Wednesday, challenging the Democratic candidate head-on with "It is not enough for anyone to say 'Trust me' — trust must be earned."
Ford came back to the University of Michigan where he was graduated 40 years ago and said he led the nation to "an incredible comeback" during his two years in the White House.
"The question in this campaign of 1976 is not, 'Who has the better vision of America?'" Ford said. "The question is, 'Who will act to make that vision a reality?'"
FORD'S SPEECH was his first outside Washington since winning the Republican nomination for election.
There were hecklers in the Michigan audience, but Ford got a one-minute standing ovation when he made his entrance with his wife.
Just as Ford was winding up his speech, a firecracker went off in the upper balcony of the Crisler Arena. Secret Service agents rushed to the spot. No one was injured.
Ford's speech was aimed at what White House aides say is Carter's greatest weakness — apparent indecisiveness and inconsistency. It said the American public deserves "specifics — not smiles, performance — not promises" from candidates.
"IT IS NOT enough for anyone to say 'Trust me.' Trust must be earned. Trust is not having to guess what a candidate means. Trust is leveling with the people before the election about what we're going to do after the election.

"Trust is not being all things to all people, but being the same thing to all people. Trust is not cleverly shading words so that each separate audience can hear what it wants to hear, but saying plainly and simply what you mean and meaning what you say."
In policy matters, Ford broke major

new ground only in the area of housing.
He said he would recommend changes in the Federal Housing Administration law "to reduce down payments on lower and middle priced housing, by up to 50 per cent."
He also said he would order the Housing and Urban Development Dept. to speed up a new federal guarantee program to lower monthly payments in early years of ownership and gradually increase them as family income rises.
ON OTHER MAJOR issues, Ford pledged to continue policies which he said were aimed at creating 2.5 million new jobs each year, holding down inflation, assuring all Americans "accessible and affordable" health care, producing "quality education," and foreign policies to keep the nation out of war.

Ford said he would fight unemployment "with an emphasis on our youth, especially the minorities," to produce "permanent jobs" in the private sector rather than "demeaning, dead-end jobs paid for out of the federal treasury."
Ford, hinting at some new future effort to help young Americans entering the job market, recalled the government has grants, loans and scholarships to help provide a college education.
"I believe we can apply this same principle to create a program for young people who choose not to go to college, but want a job at which they can learn a trade, a craft or practical business skills," he said.

Neighbors object

by JERRY THOMAS

Robert Jasch has been given the perplexing task of throwing away a boomerang.

Jasch keeps 11 pigeons at his home at 2603 Hawk Ln., Rolling Meadows. After a neighbor phoned in an anonymous complaint, police ordered Jasch to get rid of the birds.

"I don't know what to do," Jasch sobbed. "If I give my homing pigeons away, they will return. And then all I can do is kill them."

"If I DON'T, they say they'll take me to court."

"I can't fight them, I can't hire lawyers, and I don't want to fight anybody anyhow," Jasch said.

Jasch appeared before the city council Tuesday to ask its help.

He failed that night to hide the marks of several sleepless nights, but his tears did not keep him from speaking.

"HELP ME and tell me how I can keep my birds. I don't want to kill them," Jasch pleaded.

He told a story of neighborhood harassment and asked the officials to explain why his birds were harmful.

"They don't fly around the neighborhood. I take good care of them," Jasch said.

To exercise his birds, Jasch takes them miles away from his home, releases them and races them home to the pen in his backyard.

Jasch has had 7 of the 11 birds for about six years and the other 4 the past three years.

"A PAIR were my Father's Day present from the kids," he said.

Jasch said he is not a defiant person and does not wish to battle the city.

"But, I don't understand what this is hurting. Is it good for them to ask me to kill my birds?" he asked.

Jasch 44, remembers a time 26 years ago when he was the proud owner of a flock of 100 homing pigeons. "I was drafted and no one else was able to care for the birds, and so my mother had them slaughtered," he said.

"I can't do that, not this time, it isn't right," Jasch said.

"I'LL DO ANYTHING else I can to keep the birds and I'd promise there would be no more. I couldn't keep them from breeding, but I could take away the eggs and substitute glass eggs."

"Then my birds will get disgusted and then maybe they will learn to accept it and maybe I could let them out less."

Jasch said he is going to try once more to convince city officials to let him keep his birds. If that fails, he hopes to find a new home for them. In rare cases, homing pigeons can be retrained, he said, "so maybe my birds will forget me."

City Police said Jasch was issued a warning ticket Sept. 11 notifying him he is in violation of a city ordinance that prohibits keeping pigeons.

"If Jasch does not dispose of the birds by about Sept. 25 we will cite him," Police Chief Lewis Case said. Jasch would then be forced to appear in Cook County Circuit Court on the matter.
